European Pants News.
Meden Agan.
Sore Labor's Bath.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

YOU can't fool with this powerful nation, and Elisa Valerie will soon know it.

Elisa is 15 months old. Her mother died in the hospital at Ellis Island, and the baby, "an indigent immigrant," will be shipped back to Portugal.

What will become of her when she gets over there?

That's Elisa's business. She shouldn't have come here with her mother, who died in the shadow of the Statue of Liberty.

The latest news from Europe is that General Dawes, having startled Britain by saying, "only water in my embassy," startles the natives again with, "I won't wear knee pants" to court or anywhere else.

Our sturdy American by "pants" means breeches, the kind that all ambassadors wear when they see the King.

Dawes says, "You will see me in my long pants, or not at all."

That's true democracy, and besides, a corncob pipe and satin "knee pants" with silk stockings don't go well together.

The American tobacco industry produced more than eleven billion cigarettes in May.

Some were toasted, some hadn't a cough in a carload, some "satisfied," but all, as you and old age should remember, can be overdone.

Ahmed Zogu, who recently made himself King of Albania, was proud of his ability to smoke 150 cigarettes a day. Now he isn't smoking. Throat trouble has made him dumb; he can't speak. Doctors tell him he probably has cancer from smoke irritation.

Mild smoking, according to the medical profession, does no harm.

But remember the warning above the Greek temple, Meden Agan, "shun excess."

If you have sound sleep, don't envy any man his millions.

An American, very rich, knighted by King George because of the American money he spent in London, was taken to a hospital, suffering from insomnia.

In the morning he was found dead, clutching a piece of paper on which he had written that, as sleep was impossible, he could endure life no longer. He had poisoned himself.

A majority of us go through life not appreciating our greatest blessings, especially the "Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleave of care,

The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,
Chief nourisher in life's feast."

Harold F. McCormick, rich Chicagoan, welcomes his daughter, returning from abroad with her Swiss husband and two little children, and welcomes, warmly and wisely, his Swiss son-in-law.

Those half Swiss children, whose grandfather represents the harvester trust, and whose great grandfather, John D. Rockefeller, knows something about oil, are to be congratulated on the acquisition of good Swiss blood.

It will mix well with their other inheritance and should be a considerable improvement on the blood of some native, born young gentleman whose specialty is shaking up cocktails and smoking cigarettes.

Every year two thousand million American eggs are confided to hens and incubators. Every year $0,000,000 of them don't hatch.

Much lost possible wealth, at least $200,000,000, at 25 cents per chick.

The Department of Agriculture owns one hen, laying eggs of which 90 per cent hatch, and she transmits her qualities to daughters and granddaughters.

This interests millions of women in the United States.

The Government has thrown open to settlement government lands formerly covered by the Mississippi river. Wonderful lands these are, low, level, deep, heavy black loam.

As the "wind bloweth where it listeth" so the Mississippi flows where it listeth, covering and uncovering land, washing millions upon millions of cubic yards of fertile soil into the Gulf of Mexico.

When will man's intelligence control "old man river" and make him an obedient part of the national machine?

President Hoover, whose business is engineering, will attend to that, was "cut out" for that job.

HOOVER IS OPPOSED TO PLAN

Mellon and Doran Join in Repudiating the $50,000 Propaganda Campaign

Washington, June 27—President Hoover personally intervened to halt the plan of the prohibition unit to use the public schools of the country for dissemination of prohibition law observance propaganda.

President Hoover was not impressed with that form of educational activity and so expressed himself. The same view has been adopted by officials of the Treasury and by Prohibition Commissioner J. M. Doran, who not only repudiated the school drive but decided not to permit the distribution of the educational pamphlets until he had time to peruse them thoroughly.

SURPRISE TO MELLON.

On whose authority the prohibition pamphlets were prepared has not been disclosed. It appeared certain, however, that their issuance came as a complete surprise to Secretary Mellon, Under Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills

Judges Say All Fair Sex Lie

Chicago, June 27 (INS)—Are all women liars?

They are, emphatically reply two learned judges, who have listened to countless members of the fair sex xduring their long and distinguished careers.

One of the jurists is Judge Francis Borrelligv, the other is Magistrate Alexander Brough of New York's family court.

Magistrate Brough even went so far as to accuse women of being mercenary, extravagant, cold-blooded, crafty and totally lacking in moral sense.

"They marry a $25 a week man and yell because they can't live on a $60 a week scale," he declared. "Given $15 a week for the household expenses, they will flounce out and acquire a permanent wave. They dress to look seedy when they come into court for increased alimony.

"They say the husband's wages are higher than they really are. They take everything then can get and consider it their rightful share, giving nothing in return."

"I quite agree," Judge Borelli said, after he had ended another day in the domestic relations court.

"Yet fathers frequently neglect their children, and children between the ages of 14 and 16 need more care than their younger brothers and sisters."

PAULINO ON WAY; ARM LOOKS FIT

Albany, N. Y., June 27 (INS)—Paulino Uzcudun, the Basque woodchopper, who fights Max Schmeling, the German "Jack Dempsey," in New York tonight for the "Milk Fund," hopped in a seaplane for New York at 11:30 today.

Uzcudun, with a party of friends, motored here from Hoosick Falls, where he has been training.

Reports he was suffering from a lame arm were vigorously denied. These reports had forced betting to even after odds on Paulino had been 2 to 5.

The Spaniard smiled and posed for photographers as he climbed into the six-passenger cabin plane. The plane was due to reach the Columbia Yacht Club pier in New York about 1 o'clock.

NOTIFIES OFFICE OF DIST ATTY. FOLEY

Will Go There to Answer Questions; Hub Fight Manager Is Linked in Killing

Michael Rocco, alias "Micky the Wise Guy," sought for questioning in the murder of Frank Marlow, racketeer, promised today to surrrender to District Attorney William J. Foley.

While Boston police were scouring the city for the man once acquitted of murder and Hub and New York detectives were building their murder theory around a Boston fight manager, a telephone call was received at the district attorney's office.

The voice at the other end was identified by the assistant who answered, as that of Rocco. It said that Rocco would be at the district attorney's office in half an hour.

Upon Rocco's arrival, it was planned to confer with officer Edward Cassetto and David Daly, who are in the Hub investigating.

VISIT SHARON RESORT

The New York inspectors today went to a Sharon resort, in belief that there they would pick up the skein of the plot and the trail of Marlow's slayer.

In Sharon, the detectives were to check statements made in New York under police grilling, by Johnny Wilson, ex-middleweight champion, of Charlestown, and Edward J. Lewis of Brookline, regarding their movements Saturday and Sunday in Boston.

While police were searching for Rocco, who a few months ago was acquitted of a murder charge, they

MEXICO GIVES UP CHURCHES

Mexico City, July 27 (AP)—The first public masses in almost three years will be said in Mexican churches Friday. The first service will be at the Church of Nuestra Senora De La Guadalupe, the national shrine, with others following in other capital city altars.

Archbishop Pascual Diaz announced 11 churches, including that of Our Lady of the Guadalupe, were returned to the priests yesterday, and that three others were to be given back today. The priests taking charge were registered according to law.

Both Archbishop Diaz and Archbishop Ruiz y Flores of Michoacan will officiate at the Guadalupe mass. The church itself has been turned over to Fr. Manuel Rodriguez, who, for 30 years prior to its abandonment, August 1, 1926, had charge of it.

In the three years since he, attired in civilian clothes, has stood guard over his former charge at a nearby street corner.

Ninety priests already have been certified to Acting Secretary of Interior Canales for registration.

Hawkes Hops to Set New Record

Roosevelt Field, N. J., June 27—Bent on breaking all records for coast-to-coast flights, Capt. Frank M. Hawkes hopped off here at 5:12:51 a. m. today for Los Angeles.

Captain Hawkes will attempt to break the speed record from the east to the west coast and, stopping at Los Angeles only long enough to refuel, will take off again for Roosevelt Field in an effort to shatter his own west-to-east record and establish a record for the round trip.

His Lockheed Air Express, a cabin monoplane, ran 2000 feet down the runway before it lifted from the ground. After climbing steadily to an altitude of about 1500 feet Captain Hawkes headed his plane due west.

Hopkins Asks College Men to Stay in N. E.

Hanover, N. H., June 27 (AP)—President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth College appealed today to men trained in New England colleges and universities to stay and help build up New England's industries. His statement was made in comment upon a resolution passed recently by the New England Council making a similar appeal.

"There is not a single state in New England," said President Hopkins, "but that has colleges or a college at least with a national reputation, attracting students from all over the country.

"Those men come to New England and spend four years in college here, but I think that New England does not keep the proportion of these men that it might well keep if the advantages of industrial opportunities in New England were made clearer to them.

"New England industrialists as a whole are neither offering opportunities for learning a business, nor are they offering opportunities for salaries equal to those offered by Congress outside New England.

"We ought not to be selfish in this matter, but neither ought we to be blind. We need a larger proportion of these men than we are holding."

TORCH ATTACKER IDENTIFIED BY TWO ROGUES' GALLERY PHOTOS

HIRED AUTO SEIZED BY POLICE

Owner of the Car May Have Been Employer of Suspect, Officials Assert

One of the most carefully laid police dragnets ever set in this State is expected to bring about the arrest today of the depraved attacker of Miss Alice Groden, Cambridge school teacher, and Miss Mary Faramian, Back Bay cripple.

The dragnet, woven by State detectives Edward Sherlock and Edward P. O'Neil, was worked out following a positive identification of two rogues gallery photographs of the fugitive.

Who actually identified these photographs has not been disclosed by the police. It is reported, however, that it was the owner of the rented automobile said to have been used by the fiend on the nights that he drove the two girls to the lonely spot in Weston and committed his maniacal acts.

Whether the owner of this car, which has finally been located and seized by State Officers Sherlock and O'Neil and is now being carefully gone-over in a Boston garage, was the employer of the hunted man has not been affirmed or denied by the investigators.

TIP BY AUTO MAN

The fact that the suspect has been frequently referred to as an automobile salesman, specializing in used cars, indicated today that the owner of the machine may have been the employer of the man whose arrest is expected today.

If the torch attacker suspect succeeds in eluding the dragnet, it is possible that his name will be made public and a reward offered for his capture. The police are confident, however, that he will not remain out of their clutches for many hours.

While the police were away on a mysterious trip several calls were received in Boston and Weston from girls supplying names of suspects who might be involved in crimes of this type.

Two of these calls convinced the police that other girls suffered a similar experience at the hands of the man, but had failed to make any report because of a fear of unwelcome publicity that would result.

The possibility that the police will be seriously handicapped in their efforts to prosecute the fiend loomed as a strong possibility today.

Unconfirmed rumors prevalent in police circles indicated that the victims might even refuse to identify their attacker after he is taken into custody.

If, however, the police are confronted with such an impediment in their prosecution of the case, they will bring complaints on evidence they have unearthed in connection with their investigations.

MOVE TO HALT WELCHING

Carful preparations have already been made by Dist.-Atty. Robert T. Bushnell of Middlesex County to guard against any attempt that might be made by anyone involved in the case to escape justice.

The father of Alice Groden has been quoted as branding as false the slanderous charge being thrown at the gasoline soaked garments of his daughter, by her attacker.

The denial of such an occurrence does not conform with the story of Patrick Colfer, who in an exclusive interview with the Boston Evening American, declared emphatically that Miss Groden had said the man lighted a match and threw it in her direction.

"Boy" College Head Won Out Over 95

Chicago, June 27 (AP)—Robert M. Hutchins, who becomes president of the University of Chicago next month, was the darkest kind of a dark horse, it was revealed today by Harold F. Swift, president of the trustees.

During the preliminary search for a president, Dr. Hutchins was not even mentioned, Swift said. Ninety-five prominent educators were listed and the choice was to be from among them, Swift, at the suggestion of the university auditor, the name of "that young fellow, Hutchins, dean of the Yale Law School," was added.

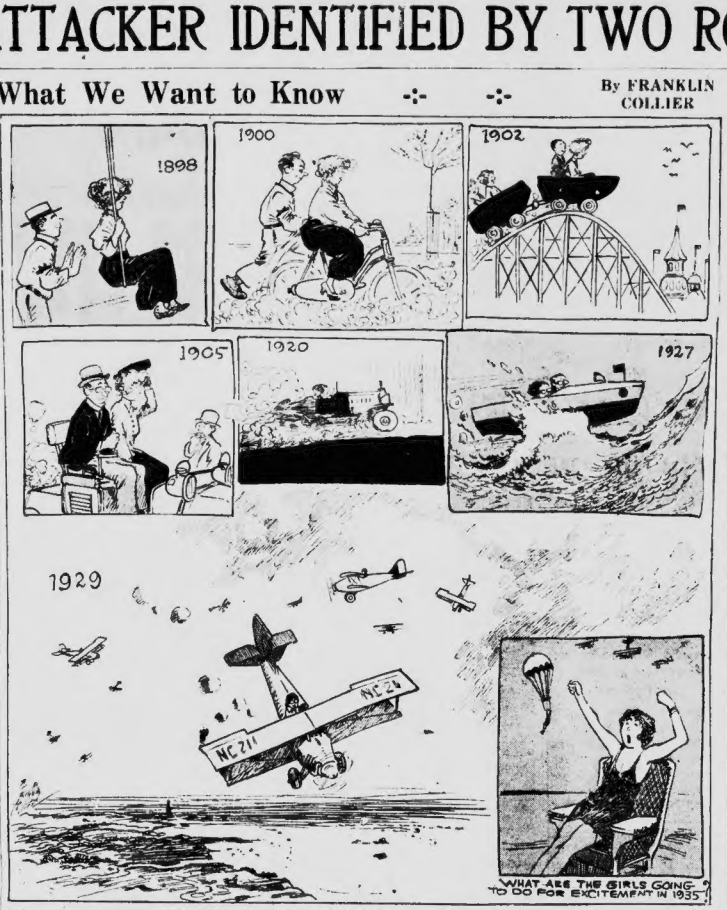
What We Want to Know

By FRANKLIN COLLIER



DOCTORS GO ON CREDIT BASIS

Chicago, June 27 (AP)—The installment plan has been invoked by the Chicago Medical Society for the benefit of those who are sick and unable to make prompt payment.

The new financial arrangement is called "the modern medical budget plan" and its purpose is to finance worthy sick persons on a cost basis, the patient to make responsible weekly or monthly installments over a period commensurate with his ability to pay.

Dr. James H. Hutton, president-elect of the society, said the plan "simply adapts to the sick the modern method of financing employed by the automobile, the radio and other industries, and enables the family of moderate means to arrange for medical or hospital care on a time-payment plan."

The patient is completely financed, Dr. Hutton said, and the physician finally receives 58.37 per cent of his total fee. The finance organization retains 15.63 per cent as the doctor's contribution to the plan, and it creates a special fund against which all bad loans are charged.

If the loan proves uncollectable the physician receives only the 58 per cent originally advanced, which assures him of receiving at least a fraction of his costs in time and services.

British Drought Worst on Record

London, June 27 (AP)—The meteorological office in a report says the past semester has been the driest recorded and serious damage is threatening all crops.

The drought extends over all England and is due partly to the fact that the three winter months saw hardly any precipitation. Water engineers everywhere are anxious. Shipley, Yorkshire, although severely rationing the water, has been forced to buy water from Bredford. Shipley has only a 11 days' supply.

Corncob Pipe Now Enters Diplomacy

Washington, June 27 (AP)—Corncob pipe diplomacy has been introduced into the State department.

In London, Joseph P. Cotton, the new under-secretary of state, claims to be as much an expert on corncob pipes as Ambassador Dawes does in the underslung variety. He keeps a box in reserve in his office to guard against the possibility of running short and his secretary has instructions to have a supply of tobacco on hand.

present record of 18 hours and 15 minutes from Los Angeles to Roosevelt Field last February. When I started from the Metropolitan Airport in Los Angeles that day I had no intention whatever of breaking the record that Art Goebel had previously set up for the coast-to-coast trip. I was at the time working for the Texas Oil Company and business affairs necessitated my presence in New York City. I dreaded the ordeal of the long train trip, it being a matter of something like four days and five nights on the road.

Being a pilot the idea occurred to me that I might make an arrangement with an airplane company to be delegated to deliver a ship to New York for them. Luck was with me and I obtained a ship.

GOING AFTER RECORD

It was suggested that I try for a non-stop as far as Chicago as a part of the plan. But before taking off it was decided that I try to make Roosevelt Field New York City in one hop if possible, although a speed record was the thing farthest from my mind.

I picked up Oscar Gregg, a mechanic, on the field, and we started. We had a good spring, full tank, all the way and did make a remarkable speed record. We managed to clip 30 minutes off the existing record.

This record of 18 hours and 15 minutes is good enough to shoot at, I feel, but being in an optimistic frame of mind just now, I am going to make a prediction. With my machine working as smoothly as it did on the recent flight from Los Angeles, and with favorable tail winds, I will skyrocket that record to where no one will touch it. I am not boasting, but I do know that old machine of mine, and it is the fastest commercial ship in the air. I made St. Louis, where I stopped over on Monday night, in 13 hours, bucking heavy head winds all the way. And I arrived at Roosevelt Field in six hours and a half after leaving St. Louis and I had a leaky gas tank to complicate things.

24-HOUR FLIGHT

I hope to make this round-trip, coast-to-coast flight, in 24 hours. I expect to get to Los Angeles in 18 hours. I am allowing two hours there for refueling and a check of the ship. It may take less time for it may be a little longer. I hope to be able to make the return half of the trip from the coast to New York in 14 hours. This may appear to be a somewhat ambitious program, but that is exactly what I am going to attempt.

Now, when the layman has it demonstrated to him that a man can start in a plane at daybreak one morning, go to the west coast and return by 2 o'clock the next afternoon it is going to make mild think that there is something to this airplane travel after all. His enthusiasm will increase by leaps and bounds. America will be the greatest air-minded nation in the world.

ON GREAT CIRCLE ROUTE

I have my route all mapped out. I accomplished that on my way East last Monday. I plan to follow the Great Circle route, which will take me over some of the principal cities of the United States. I will cover exactly 2508 miles one way, passing over Pittsburgh, Columbus, Indianapolis, Terre Haute, St. Louis, Wichita, Albuquerque, Flagstaff and then into Los angeles, and back by the same route. It will probably be my last attempt to establish a record. I have to settle down now and go to work. My plane is in good shape and I am having a radio installed to keep me informed of the weather conditions. All I want now is good flying weather.

Endurance Fliers Near 100-Hour Mark

Minneapolis, June 27 (AP)—Nearing the 100-hour mark in its effort to set a new world's record refueling flight for airplanes, the Miss Minneapolis, piloted by Thorwald "Thunder" Johnson and Owen Haughland, early today flew through rain storms which had begun early in the night.

At the plane passed the 93-hour total this morning, officials observing the progress of the flight reported that the single motor appeared to be functioning perfectly.

Atlanta, June 27 (AP)—While the rest of Young America was engaged in vacation activity Atlanta school children today remained "in harness" to greet some 15,000 teachers, who will descend on the city today and tomorrow for the National Education Association convention. Pupils of the various city schools will act as hosts to state delegations of teachers from all the United States and many foreign countries.

Father Killed Girl, Wildcat, He Thought

Gladstone, Mich., June 27 (INS)—Geraldine Thorbahn, 15, was dead today, killed by her father who mistook her for a wildcat, Roy Thorbahn, the parent, saw an object moving in the brush at his farm near here. Believing it a wildcat, he said, he got a shotgun and fired. He found the girl dead, shot through the head.

CROSSED WIRES RANG ALARMS

For the third time within a week false alarms today called Hyde Park and Dedham firemen to the Readville carshops of the New Haven railroad, and investigation reveals that crossed wires were the cause.

The two previous alarms were supposed to have been due to lightning because they occurred during storms, but a more thorough investigation today disclosed to real cause.

There are two boxes, one on the Boston side and the other on the Dedham side of the carshops, and both sounded simultaneously 13 each case.

WILL PHONE TO 3 CONTINENTS

Buenos Aires, Argentina, June 27 (AP)—A "super-wireless" station, under construction at Hurlingham, a few miles from Buenos Aires, probably will be ready for operation at the end of August, linking Buenos Aires with a great communication system.

Similar plants are nearing completion in Madrid, in the United States, in Central America and in Chile. When finished Argentina will be able to get telephonic communication on at least three of the other five continents.

SAN FRANCISCO HONORS FLAG PARTY

Gives Royal Reception to Winners in National Contest Starting on World Tour

San Francisco, June 27—Children of Old Glory—champions of the flag, were here today on the threshold of their tour around the world. What a reception San Francisco gave them.

Into a city fired with patriotism bands playing, flags unfurled, entered the quartet of young Americans who were victorious over a field of 20,000 contenders in the National Flag Contest.

Sirens shrieked as they set foot in San Francisco.

Flowers fell upon them from an admiring populace.

The arches of the ferry building rang with stirring, matching bit of the "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Khaki-clad units of the Sixth Coast Artillery band fell into step and out Market at like a triumphant procession of old swept the escort to these modern day crusaders for the banner that waved over Bradywine and Bunker Hill and Santiago and Chateau-Thierry.

Two smiling, charming American girls, Alma Grove of Byronville, Ga., and Mary McGonigle of Troy, N. Y., unspoiled by the plaudits that have been showered upon them in every city and hamlet in their trip across the continent.

Two high school boys—regular guys—laughing and teasing the girls a bit, a little bothered about the hang of their hair and the set of their neckties—Merle Clark of Detroit, Mich., and Robert L. Sullivan of Syracuse, N. Y.

Accompanied by their chaperon, Mrs. Edwin C. Gregory, Floyd Williamson, representative of the Hearst newspapers and Col. James A. Moss, president of the United States Flag Association, the flag-flag champions were greeted over a barrier of baggage even before they alighted from the train.

Motion picture machines and flashlight cameras marked every step of their progress aboard the ferry boat—interviewers and passengers pressed upon them. Capt. W. J. Siems waved aside regulations and allowed Alma and Mary to climb the ladder to his cabin perched high on the top deck—and to steer the boat in open waters after Yerba Bueno island lay well astern.

It was such a night as is made to leave a lasting impression upon the traveler who first crosses San Francisco Bay and sees the vague, towering silhouette of the city etched against an evening sky.

Paris Drink-Sellers to Celebrate

Paris, June 27 (INS)—The drinks will be on the house on July 6 when the cafe-keepers of Paris celebrate the 300th anniversary of their existence as a corporation.

No one knows when the first Frenchman took his first drink, but the business his thirst created struggled along in a disorganized manner for several centuries.

The first attempt to regulate the sale of drinks over a "bar" was made in 1268, when a royal edict made it necessary for all dispensers of drinks to apply for permits. Previous to that time anyone with a couple of bottles and a table could make his neighbors pay for liquor, but it was not until July 6, 1629, that the cafe industry was definitely organized.

On the occasion of the tercentenary Parisian cafes are expected to display the coat of arms of their corporation—a blue field with a silver ship and a cluster of grapes.

RUM CRUSADER READY TO QUIT

Aurora, Ill., June 27 (AP)—State's Attorney George D. Carbary, reform prosecutor whose day raiders killed Mrs. Lillian DeKing during a raid on her home, has announced his prohibition enforcement crusade is at an end unless the Kane County supervisors's committee approves a $7,000 expense bills, totaling nearly $7,000.

The county board once before refused to pass the bills and referred them to the judiciary committee to be "whittled down." It was understood they have been reduced about one-third by the committee.

Included in the expenses was an item of $1700 for hospital and medical fees for deputy Harry Smith, who was wounded by Mrs. DeKing's son after the woman had been killed. Oscar G. Carlson, Attorney-General, has ruled the county is not liable for such expenses.

Protestant churches have aligned themselves with Carbary and petitions have been circulated by pastors urging the county supervisors to "co-operate" with the prosecutor by passing the expense bills.

CHIANG VIEWS FANG'S GOING AS VICTORY

Insists That the Nationalist Government Has Come to Stay

Peping, China, June 27 (AP)—Chiang Kai-Shek, president of the Nationalist government, who is in Peping for a week's visit, today discussed announcement of the decision of Feng Yu-Hsiang, chief oppositionist, to go abroad, pointing to it as proof of the Nationalist government's stability.

Chiang Kai-Shek declared Feng's decision to leave the country "ought to convince doubting Thomases that the Nationalists have come to stay."

He denounced the so-called reorganizationists and criticized Feng for his connection with the group opposing the people's party. He declared the reorganizations were without principle, were tained with communism and devoid of patriotism.

"It seems to me Feng was misled by this group in his recent move against Nanking. That Feng now realizes his mistake is shown by his desire to go abroad," said Chiang.

Chiang said that the Nanking government had taken into consideration Feng's past services and repealed its recent punitive order against him. He added that the government had appointed Feng a high commissioner to study industrial conditions in Europe and America and to report regularly to Nanking, the government to pay all expenses.

DOES NOT CARE FOR COOKING

Declares She Had Rather Be a Great Artist Than a Great Tennis Star

Wimbledon, June 27 (INS)—Helen Wills, brilliant American tennis star, who has successfully defended her championship in the Wimbledon tennis tournament, is going back to college after her coming marriage.

She is going back to learn more about art, because she doesn't like housework and she is afraid if she stays around the house all the time she is going to have to learn how to wield a frying pan.

And she prefers wielding brushes or a tennis racket.

WON'T LEARN COOKING.

For a few minutes, the "Queen of the Courts" took her mind off this Mecca of the tennis world today and told International News Service of her plans for the future and the reasons behind them.

"I cannot cook a thing and I know absolutely nothing about housework," she said. "Neither do I intend to learn. There are so many things to do which are more enjoyable."

But Helen, obviously, was not referring to tennis, for she continued:

"I would far, far rather be a great artist than a great tennis player. I am going to keep on studying painting. I do a good deal of other work besides practising tennis—landscapes and some portraits, although I have not done much in oils as yet.

WANTS TO TAKE UP GOLF.

"I have left the university once but did not finish my three years' course, and I should like to. So I think I will go back.

"I may be married before then, but that won't make any difference. It doesn't these days, does it? I intend to go on with everything just the same when I am married—my tennis and my painting, and I want to take up golf as well."

Helen, asked about her marriage intimated it "might" take place this fall.

Will Surrender

Michael Rocco, alias "Mickey the Wise Guy," who announced today he would surrender for questioning in Marlow slaying.

Hub Arrest in Slaying of Marlow Expected

SURE OF HUB PLOT.

The motive for the Marlow murder lies right here in Boston, detectives of New York and the Hub have established.

It is understood that within the last few months the Boston manager, whose principal "racket" is liquor running and peddling, has been hi-jacked to the extent of about $150,000 by lieutenants of the Marlow gang.

When Marlow, formerly a close friend of the manager and a close friend of his friends, was told to "lay off" there was a refusal and the hi-jacking continued.

Then came Marlow's sudden death beside a lonely road in Flushing, L. I., after he had been taken for a ride by "friends" who called him into a car on Broadway.

It is the police theory that the killing was done by a guerilla of the Boston fight manager, the same lieutenant who once before put a man on the spot."

The guerilla was a friend of Marlow's but he is a closer friend of the fight manager, according to police understanding—and, for the greater friend, he killed the lesser.

According to police, another Boston fight manager and promoter has been informed that he is one of the next three "tagged" to go in the liquor war.

This manager, within an hour after Marlow's body was discovered, received a mysterious telegram from New York, informing him of the killing.

CHECK ON WILSON

Billy Duffy, well known in sporting circles in Boston is another brought to New York police headquarters for questioning. He is known by the Boston police to have been friendly with Johnny Wilson for many years.

Duffy is said to be a partner in a New York night club. "Mickey the Wise Guy" and Duffy are acquainted, Boston police say.

As an outgrowth of the Marlow slaying, a big bootlegging combine, operating in Boston and New York is being looked into here. The combine started operations in the Back Bay district, later moving downtown, where it did a strictly retail business.

New York police say the combine netted more than $1,000,000 last year, within a short distance of the theatrical district.

"Mickey, the Wise Guy," was acquitted on a charge of slaying John J. Donovan of South Boston, in an alleged liquor feud, when he was tried with William "Billy" O'Donnell some time ago. New York police say the Marlow slaying resembles that killing in many aspects.

A trail of pretty women has confronted the investigators of the Marlow slaying. Entrance of the sweetheart of "Mickey the Wise Guy," has added another figure to the gallery of women that were gathered around the slain racketeer.

SEEK HUB RACKETEERS

Two leaders in the Boston underworld were believed by police to have knowledge that would be of great assistance in the investigation. During the recent visit of Marlow to Boston, at the time of Bertazolli-Maloney fight, it is stated, Marlow offered a proposition to these men in an effort to settle a dispute over the liquor trade here, which was not accepted, it was learned.

Boston bootleggers were unable to compete with the prices charged for the cheap Belgian alcohol which Marlow was supplying the speakeasy trade here.

With Al "Scarface" Capone beginning his battle for release in the Philadelphia courts today, gangsters are being closely watched in the big cities.

Marlow is reported to have gone to Philadelphia to straighten out a business deal shortly after it was announced that Capone might be released.

Preparations for a lavish gangster funeral for Marlow, with a casket that will cost more than $10,000, are being made in New York. Everything will be done by his associates in gangland to see that he has a spectacular send-off.

O'Donnell Picture Printed by Mistake

In two early editions today, the Boston Evening American printed a picture of William O'Donnell of Longwood ave., Roxbury, as the likeness of Michael Rocco, alias "Mickey the Wise Guy," sought by police for questioning in connection with the Marlow murder.

O'Donnell's name never has entered the Marlow case and O'Donnell is not sought for questioning in connection with any crime. The Boston Evening American regrets publication of his likeness with an erroneous caption and takes this means to clear up any misunderstanding that may have resulted.

TREATY DAY TO BE SORROW DAY IN GERMANY

Nation-Wide Protest of "War Guilt Lie" in the Peace Treaty to Be Made

Berlin, June 27 (INS)—All Germany is preparing to observe the 11th anniversary tomorrow of the signing of the Versailles treaty.

The anniversary will be celebrated as a day of sorrow in protest against the stigma of guilt for the World War which the treaty placed upon Germany.

A flood of protests against what Germany calls the "war guilt lie" has already been issued by virtually every social and cultural organization in the country, and these will be climaxed tomorrow by a proclamation from the German cabinet, signed by President Von Hindenburg, which may prove to be one of the most amazing documents ever issued.

The proclamation will serve notice on the world that Germany repudiates her confession of war guilt, embodied in the Versailles treaty, on the grounds that it was "extorted" by force, and that it was not a voluntary admission.

At 8 p. m. tomorrow, 10 years to the hour after the treaty was signed, Protestant churches throughout Germany will toll bells of mourning, while flags will be flown at half-mast and draped with ribbons of black.

The Berlin Cathedral has invited members of the government and the Reichstag to attend a public mourning service, and it is expected that many prominent persons will be present.

and Assistant Secretary Seymour Lowman, in charge of prohibition.

Announcement of the propaganda campaign was made by a subordinate at the prohibition bureau while Commissioner Doran was out of the city. Immediately on his return a formal statement was issued explaining the Treasury's position, with only indefinite reference to the use of the $50,000 congressional appropriation authorized to educate the public as to the advantages of prohibition.

HAS $50,000 TO SPEND

In this connection it also was learned that the Treasury was not anxious for the $50,000 educational campaign appropriation, feeling that little benefit from the enforcement standpoint would accrue. Now that the money is available it probably will be spent although much how the funds will be made clear.

Records by officials of the prohibition bureau on the morality of the dry law has been echoed recently by high treasury authorities.

During the old Haynes dry regime reams of information relative to enforcement conditions were issued every week by a publicity man for the bureau. When Haynes was succeeded by Dr. Doran the press agent office was closed and information was given out by the commissioner or the treasury. Officials said that it was considered desirable to continue this policy.

France Stirred by Talkie Movie Plan

Paris, June 27 (AP)—The Comedie Francaise, "House of Moliere," and the world's oldest legitimate theater, may become the French home of the talking movies if a proposal made at the extraordinary meeting of its members is adopted, which has stirred literary, art and dramatic circles.

Dr. Emile Fabre, as an alternative has suggested the "talkies" be produced at an old theater branch on the Rue De Richelieu for the benefit of the provinces, colonies and foreign countries, while the regular classic repertoire was continued on the principal stage. The question will be decided at another meeting.

MEDFORD ASKS NEW BIDS FOR SCHOOL

The Medford schoolhouse building commission has reconsidered its vote of last Saturday to accept the bid of $555,000 by Thomas O'Connor & Co. of Cambridge for the general contract for the construction of the addition to the high school, including the heating and ventilating, plumbing, electrical work and other subcontracts.

The commission held a four hour session with Mayor Edward H. Larkin, City Solicitor Jasper N. Johnson and Chester B. Dunham, the architect. The vote to reconsider came after the written opinion of City Solicitor Johnson to Mayor Larkin on the legal phases of the vote to accept the bid of O'Connor & Co. was read.

The commission then rejected all of the 11 bids submitted. Then a vote was taken to call for new bids to be submitted for opening on or before 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, July 6, at the mayor's office.

The new bids for the general contract will not include the heating and ventilating contract, which is to be advertised for bids separately and opened at the same time as bids for the general contract.

The purpose of separating the bids is to avoid delay on the installation of the new heating plant in the high school building.

Representatives of O'Connor & Co. with Attorney Daniel R. McIsaac of Boston appeared before the commission and reserved the right of the company to object and proceed at law on the contract as voted to the company Saturday. The contract was not approved by Mayor Larkin at any time in writing.

"CAN EUROPE WEATHER THE STORM? WILL SHE NOT BECOME ONE VAST CEMETERY? WILL NOT THE WORLD'S ECONOMIC AND CULTURAL CENTER OF GRAVITY SHIFT TO AMERICA?" Trotsky asked himself these questions after the war. Now, he says, "Even today, with all the progress of Europe's stabilization, this question keeps recurring in my mind, in all its significance." Writing his autobiography from Turkey, where he lives in exile, Trotsky raises many such pertinent questions and reveals for the first time secrets of Soviet Russia! Read this amazing story—it begins in the Boston Sunday Advertiser next Sunday.

Firemen Rescue Beer and Cops Seize It

Rockland, June 27—Efficient firemen saved a cellarful of alleged beer for Walter Breach, Liberty st. carpenter, today—but equally efficient policemen seized the salvaged wet goods and applied for a warrant for Breach's arrest.

Called to extinguish a blaze in the basement of Breach's home, the fire department labored valiantly, moving barrels and cases to a place of safety. If some of the contents dripped, and the drip wasn't water, that was nobody's fault.

Chief of Police George J. Pott, however, sniffed more than smoke. He investigated the barrels and he opened the cases. A few moments later, at the head of a hastily organized raiding squad, he seized the property which the flames had spared.

According to the official inventory, the alleged contraband included 15 cases of beer, 50 gallons of mash, a 15-gallon still and 35 empty beer cases.

The fire, the origin of which was not established, did damage of several hundred dollars to the Breach dwelling.

Warrel, general manager of the Sells Floto Circus at Willimantic, Ct., notifying Mix that the suitcase, which according to the confession of Everett, contained $3800 in bills, is in the possession of local authorities. No attempt will be made to open the suitcase until Mix or his representative arrives here.

2 FLEE IN BOAT AS $20,000 YACHT BURNS

Buzzards Bay, June 27 — After burning to the water's edge the Atwater Kent's $20,000 yacht Aretha sank in the main channel.

The two members of her crew took to a lifeboat when flames mounted the rigging and were picked up by the crew of the Coast Guard patrol 280 and taken to New Bedford.

Chief Boatswain's Mate Augustus Perry, in command of patrol boat 280, was cruising in the vicinity of Red Wing Neck light when a sheet of flame attracted the lookout's attention within half a mile of the ship's position. The 75-footer sped to the rescue.

The Arietha, a 50-foot yacht rigged with auxiliary motors, was making her way from New York to Buzzards Bay, where Kent and his family were to board her for a vacation trip.

Trouble developed with the motors and there was an explosion followed by a shaft of flame which climbed the rigging and set the sails ablaze.

DRY PAMPHLET FOR TEACHERS BANNED

Washington, June 27—The prohibition bureau suppressed the "Hints to School Teachers" pamphlet recently compiled by Miss Anna Sutter, educational director, and thereby completed its veto of her plan of carry the battle for prohibition into the public schools.

Miss Sutter left for Atlanta to open her "educational campaign" during the N. E. A. convention but at the last minute her superior officer decided that the pamphlet through which she has been planning to revise the "three R's" should not accompany her. She had a large bundle of them, ready for distribution among the school teachers who will be at Atlanta, but Dr. James M. Doran explained that he had decided to "revise" them before permitting their general circulation.

When Miss Sutter returns from Atlanta next week, Dr. Doran may permit her to talk for publication again. In her contacts with the school teachers she may receive some valuable hints for carrying on the crusade without antagonizing those who believe that the schools should be free of propaganda of all kinds.

LOVE PRICE UP ON DEAD MAN

Camden, N. J., June 27 — Mrs. Gertrude Hein of West Collingswood has been awarded a verdict of $40,000 by a jury in the Camden Circuit Court where she had sued Mrs. Emma G. Pereira, a widow, for alienating the affections of her husband, Alfred O. Hein, now dead.

The amount of damages was $15,000 more than was asked by Mrs. Hein. Mrs. Pereira's husband died two years ago. Hein died early this year.

Mrs. Pereira was absent from the courtroom when the verdict was returned. She had left when John Pereira, a brother of her dead husband, and Adrick Bonnelli, a Philadelphia lawyer, and a brother-in-law of Pereira, appeared to inquire about her husband's death.

Both men learned of the decease only since the alienation suit was instituted by Mrs. Hein.

HITS YOUNGER GENERATION

East Northfield, June 27—"The younger generation is a seeking generation in confusion," Miss Margaret Slattery, author and lecturer of Boston, declared in her address to the girls attending the Northfield Young Women's Conference here.

Asserting that life is a game of consequences, Miss Slattery said: "A great many who play the game, however, do not want to take the consequences. Each individual wants to be his own law. When any sort of law comes in his way he moves the law. The same individual is often the most ardent supporter of the Constitution and is scared to death about the Reds for fear something will undermine our Constitution. And yet there he is a dozen times each day doing exactly as he pleases."

Inspector Gets $500 of Reward

New Bedford, June 27—While this city buzzed with argument as to whether Chief Inspector Walter Almond had a legal or moral right to the $1000 reward offered for arrest and conviction of Fannie Lee Minter and her alleged abductor, Jack Freith, the inspector, with $500 of the total amount collected, announced with a note of assurance that he would collect the remaining $500 from the State of Texas shortly. He said he found the pair through the help of a friend.

ROCKY LANDING SAVES PLUCKY AIRMAN

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

When it rains it pours, and when new airplanes start coming into the Boston airport, they come in bunches. Yesterday was the busiest and dizziest day in the history of the airport, with four new planes arriving, and a clever pilot saving his plane by setting it down on a rocky beach after the motor quit over the harbor.

Vieing for first honors on the new planes were the Keystone, Patrician and the Savoia-Marchetti, both of which will be used in passenger service between Boston and New York. The Patrician is an 18-passenger job, with two pilots and a steward, and it is powered with three Wright Cyclone engines of 525 horsepower each.

The giant ship, the largest of its kind in the country, has a high speed of 150 miles an hour, and cruises at 125 miles an hour. Colonial Airways System will use it on the passenger run for one month beginning Friday. The ship went back to New York with a party of Boston newspapermen and Colonial officials.

The Savoia-Marchetti is a twin-hulled, twin-motored seaplane, capable of carrying the same number of passengers as the Keystone. This ship, the Roger Q. Williams, was christened and named in Roger's honor at Old Orchard shortly before the unsuccessful take-off for Rome some weeks ago. A novel twist to the seaplane line will be a rather thrilling ride in a speed boat from the float to the dock on both ends of the run. The ships will land in North river, New York, and it looks as though Colonial will have some competition in the near future.

Carey Feldman, chief pilot for the Wetmore-Savage aircraft corporation, brought in a new Buhl sedan, powered with a Wright J-6 300 horsepower motor, and built for six passengers. It is painted green and light yellow, and when all three, the Keystone, Savoia and the Buhl, are lined up at the port, there sure is a lot of color added to the dead line.

Flying about 300 feet over Governor's Island in his Oxx-motored Travel Air, Fred Webber, of New Bedford was confronted with the possibility of getting very wet in the harbor when his motor stopped. Fred looked the situation over, and decided that the beach on the end of the airport fill was the best bet, and stretched his glide until he was in position, and then set the Travel Air down on the rocky beach.

Fred Webber

The ship rolled into the water, and became a bit mud-spattered in the process, but on-side of that there wasn't a thing done. Roy Keeley, from Taunton, put new

"HERE I WAS IN NEW YORK, THE CITY OF PROSE AND OF THE LEGEND OF CAPITALISTIC AUTOMATISM, ITS ARCHITECTURE A TRIUMPH OF CUBISM, ITS MORAL PHILOSOPHY THE WORSHIP OF THE ALMIGHTY DOLLAR."—Thus writes Trotsky in his autobiography—an amazing tale of his deportation from country to country, of Bloody Sunday, Red October, and the triumph of Bolshevism! Begins next Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Air Stowaway Home

Arthur Schreiber, 22-year-old stowaway on the French monoplane, Yellow Bird, on its ocean-spanning flight, being greeted by his father, Morris Schreiber, Portland (Maine) jeweler, upon his arrival in New York on S. S. Leviathan. Young Schreiber was greeted in Paris with acclaim, although many blamed him for the fliers' failure to reach their destination.

distributor points in the magneto, and then flew the ship off to the next beach, which was hard, smooth sand.

In order to pile up her flying time, and get training for the trans-continental air race next fall from Los Angeles to Cleveland, Miss Neva Paris, a 46-hour solo pilot, came up from Curtiss Field, Valley Stream, Long Island, in a Curtiss Fledgling, she had never been to Boston before by air, but found the local airport without trouble. When Miss Paris arrived, and with the weather continuing good, she decided to extend her flight to Portland, so after re-fueling, she hopped off for the airport at Scarboro, outside of Portland, Me.

G. Hogan "Hemie" Felton, who received his Limited Commercial pilot's license the other day, has been appointed airport manager of the Curtiss Flying Service field at What Cheer airport, Pawtucket, R. I. Hemie breezed through his flying test like nothing at all, and since April 9 to today he has put in 52 hours of solo flying, the largest amount of any Curtiss student in Boston in the amount of time.

Felton will take up his new duties next Monday, and any of the boys who happen to drop into the What Cheer field will find a whole-hearted welcome awaiting them.

Capt. Irwin K. MacWilliams, formerly operations manager of the Worcester airport for Curtiss, has been transferred to the Buffalo City station of the Curtiss company, in the capacity of sales manager. We are sorry to have Mac so far away, but we know that he is still thinking of the gang at Worcester and Boston, and the rest of the Curtiss stations in New England.

We have received a communication from Dan Rochford asking us to serve on the show committee of the third annual Aviation Exposition, to be held in the Boston Garden, Sept. 23 to 28. We are very happy to accept Dan's offer, and we are sure that the air show, which for the first time will be separated from the radio show, will be a success.

U. S. TO REDUCE FLIER DEATHS

Washington, June 27 (AP)—An investigation of the aviation schools in the United States is being made by the Commerce Department in an effort to reduce the number of air fatalities.

Maj. Clarence M. Young, director of aeronautics of the department, expects the investigation to reduce greatly, if it does not eradicate the "ten-hour fly-by-night schools" by making it possible to single out and list schools worthy of an appropriate rating.

"In this way," he explains, "it will be known which schools are approved and the ones that are not, and anyone who really wants to learn to fly naturally would attend an approved institution."

Navy Will Sell Two Unfit Old Cruisers

Washington, June 27 (AP)—Two decommissioned light cruisers, the New Orleans and the Albany no longer fit for naval service, are to be offered for sale by the navy.

The ships were purchased during the Spanish-American War from the Brazilian government. The New Orleans participated in the engagement off Santiago, Cuba, against Cervera's squadron. The Albany saw service in several expeditions to Central America during the first decade of the century.

72 Bananas Just Breakfast for Him

New York, June 27 (AP)—Seventy-two bananas for breakfast, 15 apples and 22 oranges for supper. They are typical meals of Azwan, a giant ape brought from Sumatra, which can be purchased for a pet or other purposes for around $25,000. He's 5 feet 10, weighs 380 and is 12 feet across with arms outstretched.

URGE SEPARATE U. S. BUREAU OF AVIATION

New York, June 27 (INS)—The American Society for the Promotion of Aviation today revealed exclusively through International News Service the contents of a letter written by Thomas L. Hill, president of the society, to the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, in which the chamber is requested to urge establishment of a separate government department of aeronautics, ranking equally with the Army and Navy as a defense unit.

The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce recently completed arrangements for inauguration of a national radio broadcast in the interest of aviation.

LAUDS BROADCAST

"This broadcast not only should serve to enlighten the great American public in matters aeronautical," Hill wrote, "but should operate to offset the insidious and consistent propaganda of both army and navy departments which has encouraged the public to believe that aviation must always remain as auxiliary arm of these departments."

Hill then pointed out that arguments similar to this were employed during the court-martial of Gen. William Mitchell in 1925 in an effort to stem the growing demand for a separate department for aeronautics.

SOCIETY BACKS PLAN.

"During the Mitchell trial and ever since," the letter continued, "the American Society for the Promotion of Aviation has consistently urged that a separate department for aeronautics be created and we now feel that any organization professing to be of, and for, aeronautics must whole-heartedly support this measure or suffer the suspicion of being in the class with those who 'run with the hare and hunt with the hounds.'"

Swedish Flier Is in Air Again

Reykjavik, Iceland, June 27 (INS)—The Swedish monoplane Svenge, piloted by Capt. Albin Ahrenberg, hopped off today. Apparently heading for Ivigut, Greenland, on the third leg of a long interrupted transatlantic flight.

After arriving at Reykjavik from Stockholm by way of Bergen, Norway, Ahrenberg and his two companions were detained for several weeks by unfavorable weather and engine trouble.

Their ultimate destination is New York.

FILM PRODUCER NAILS BABSON CHARGES

Washington, June 27 (INS)—The motion picture is a tremendous factor in combating the crime waves that have been sweeping the nation.

This was proved in a record laid before the American people by Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Refuting Babson's charge, Milliken presented facts and figures to show that it is in those cities wheer motion pictures have been most severely censored that crime is most rampant. He said:

DISCOURAGES CRIME.

"The methods of treating dramatic material in motion pictures by invariably punishing the criminal and the villain tends to discourage crime rather than to encourage it. The opinion of leading criminologists and scientists in this country and Europe has been adduced in confirmation of this fact.

"Six American companies produce, each of them, two editions of newsreels every week. We estimate that any news event which is featured by all six of these companies is eventually seen by 50,000,000 individuals in motion picture theater audiences.

"Has it occurred to you that the newsreels never feature or refer to the curren crime scandal, whatever it may be? This did not happen. It was brought about, and the policy continues to be maintained by the exercise of conscious self-control by teh newsreel companies under the guidance of Mr. Hays.

NEWSREELS AND CRIME.

"The chief objection to portraying actual crime in the newsreels, as compared with imaginary crime shown in entertainment pictures, is that in real life punishment is neither swift nor certain and, when it occurs at all, would not be seen in the same picture with the crime itself. In the crook story as shown on the screen, on the contrary, punishment follows quickly and certainly after the offense.

Milliken then cited that under "the formula," a gentlemen's agreement among the organized producers of motion pictures, "nearly 200 so-called best sellers, including plays and books have been rejected as unsuitable formatioo picture purposed because they were salacouls or violate decent sensibilities of some nationality or creed."

O'BRIEN NAMED MIDDLESEX CLUB HEAD

R. L. O'Brien, former editor of The Boston Herald, was elected president of the Middlesex Club at its annual meeting at the Parker House.

Several speakers, including W. W. Lufkin, collector of the port of Boston, praised O'Brien in their addresses.

The newly-elected president said he was interested in reorganizing the club functions. One point brought out in his talk was the concentration upon one Republican dinner a year instead of several gatherings as is the case at present. O'Brien stressed also the importance of co-operating in such an affair with the various women's Republican organizations for the purpose of obtaining unanimity.

"We want to make as large as possible a contribution to continued Republican control of the state and of the nation," he said, referring to the continued placing of the name of Massachusetts in the "doubtful column" of states as a result of the last national election.

Other officers chosen included Calvin Coolidge, William M. Butler, Frederick H. Gillett and Frank G. Allen, vice-presidents; Charles H. Ramsay of Cambridge, treasurer; Col. Daniel Needham of Boston, secretary; Harry H. Williams, Brockton, assistant secretary; Edgar R. Champlin of Boston, Samuel L. Powers of Newton, Channing H. Cox of Boston and Col. Charles S. Proctor, the retiring president; members of the advisory board, and Charles B. Balcom of West Newton, auditor.

MISSING WIFE IS SOUGHT

Bridgton, Me., June 27—Every effort possible is being made to locate Mrs. Daniel Ward, long a resident of the Sandy Creek section of this town, who, on June 18, failed to return to her home here after a probable visit to friends in Portland. Both her husband and her father, Eugene Long, 80 years old and who recently arrived at the Ward home to spend the summer with his daughter and husband, as has been his custom for a number of years, appeal to any person or persons who may have seen her for information concerning her whereabouts.

Mrs. Ward was last seen by a friend at South Lawrence, Mass., railroad station, and at that time was wearing black pumps, flesh-colored stockings, black dress with a figure of red roses, yellow coat and black hat. She is about 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs about 143 pounds and wears dark-rimmed glasses. When wearing a low-necked dress a scar is noticeable on her right shoulder.

COPS CLEARED IN FALL RIVER

Fall River, June 27—Charges of neglect of duty preferred by Chief Martin Feeney against Patrolman Michael McDermott, member of the local police department for the past 37 years and former president of the Massachusetts Police Relief Association, were dismissed by the board of police commissioners and a similar decision was announced in the case of Patrolman Henry J. Desrosiers charged with assaulting a prisoner, Henry Vadeboncour, 470 Eastern ave., who was the complainant in the latter case.

Both members of the department were given hearings last night and the police commissioners announced their decision today.

Patrolman McDermott was charged with neglect of duty in having left his post at the circus grounds on the night of June 6 without having notified his superior officer.

Vadeboncour complained that Desrosiers used undue force in arresting him and that as the result of the officer's conduct he is now under a physician's care.

Seized on Charge of Robbing Farmer

ANTI-WAR PACT SOON TO BE IN EFFECT

Washington, June 27—Frank B. Kellogg, ex-Secretary of State, personally may witness the formal ceremony placing into full force the antiwar treaty which bears his name and for completion of which he strove so diligently before leaving office.

Deposit by Japan of its formal ratification of the treaty is now the only step necessary to bring the pact into operation. The approval by the Japanese privy council of the treaty is expected to be followed by its immediate sanction by Emperor Hirohito.

Although no arrangements have been made for the ceremony of Japan's deposit which will bring the peace instrument into force, it was widely suggested in governmental circles here that Mr. Kellogg probably would be invited to come to Washington to see the completion of the work which he started.

STIMSON ELATED

It is believed the arrangements will be made by Secretary of State Stimson and the Japanese Ambassador Debouih.

Mr. Stimson expressed gratification over the action of the Japanese privy council. He added that he believed Mr. Kellogg would be very pleased by the pact's approval by Japan.

No proclamation by President Hoover is necessary to make the treaty effective, Secretary Stimson said, and the ceremony of Japan's deposit would bring the pact into full force.

The treaty's formulation grew out of a message by Foreign Minister Briand of France to the American people on April 6, 1927, on the occasion of the 10th anniversary of the entrance of the United States into the World War.

15 POWERS IN PACT

As a result of subsequent negotiations between Kellogg and Briand, representatives of 15 world powers gathered in Paris and by signing the treaty solemnly bound their countries to renounce war as a national policy.

President Hoover, in his Memorial Day address, said "If this agreement is to fulfill its high purpose, we and other Nations must accept the consequences, we must clothe faith and idealism with action.

"We believe," the President continued, "the time has come when we must know whether the pact we have signed is real, whether we are condemned to further and more extensive naval construction. Limitation upward is not now our goal, but actual reduction of existing commitments to lower levels."

The President added that this treaty means an abandonment of the aggressive use of arms.

Hugh S. Gibson, American Ambassador to Belgium and head of the American delegation to the Preparatory Disarmament Commission at Geneva, emphasized at the recent meeting of the commission the necessity of its application to the disarmament problem and similar sentiments now are being expressed both here and abroad in connection with the naval conversations.

TWO BAY STATE YOUTHS KILLED BY LIVE WIRE

Great Barrington, June 27—Grabbing an electric wire as he was spraying trees, George Wellington Goodrich of 123 Appleton ave, Pittsfield, was electrocuted at Ashley Falls, about two miles south of the town of Sheffield.

The young man was climbing from one limb to another when he took hold of a bare electric wire carrying 4400 volts and was instantly killed, falling some 45 feet to the ground.

He was 18 years old, the son of George P. Goodrich of Pittsfield, Berkshire County Chief Scout Executive. The young man attended the Pittsfield schools and was active in Scout work. He is survived by his parents and one sister.

A week ago he started work with the R. M. Gibbs Co., foresters, of Pittsfield.

Rehoboth, June 27—Joseph Machado, seven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Machado of Barney ave., was electrocuted when he grasped a five wire under a tree only a few hundred yards from his home.

The boy, with some companions, came upon the wire which had been worn through and burned off by constant rubbing against a tree branch. He dared his companions to touch it and when they hesitated he reached down and grabbed it. When his father reached the spot, summoned by the other children, the boy was dead.

GIRL SAVED BY LIFEGUARD

Miss Evelyn Holmes, 20, 137 Pleasant st., Dorchester, was rescued from drowning by Charles Mackey, lifeguard, of 20 Tickner st., South Boston, near the women's section of L st. bath house, South Boston.

Miss Holmes was swimming about 40 feet from shore, when she became fatigued and called for help. Mackey, who was towing a boat on the inner side of the wooden wall which separates the bathhouse section from the beach, heard Miss Holmes' cries and went around to her aid. He saw her sink, dove after her and brought her ashore.

There he applied resuscitation methods, assisted by Patrolman John J. Kearns of Station 2, a member of the beach squad. After 15 minutes they revived Miss Holmes and removed her to the emergency room of the L st. bath house, where she was taken with chills.

She was removed in the police ambulance of Station 1 to the Boston City Hospital.

Will Mahoney, comedian, recently bought the Ludington flash, Miss Eastern, and he expects a fast summer in the speed boat. It is now on display at the Eastern Service Marine Co. showrooms in Commonwealth ave., headquarters of the northeastern distributors. Will is shown about to take off.

PARKER GIVES MOTORING WARNING

Capt. George A. Parker, registrar of motor vehicles, in the hope of stopping what he characterizes as "the auto accidents epidemic" urges activity of police and courts. In a statement on the "epidemic" Capt. Parker says:

"The public should be advised that the season of summer motoring has opened with an unprecedented number of deaths in which motor vehicles were involved. On Tuesday of this week the Registry recorded 11 fatalities, all but one of which occurred within 24 hours. This is the highest number of deaths recorded for one day.

"This terrible record of fatalities is due to carelessness and can be stopped if all who use our highways, whether as pedestrians or automobilists, will face honestly their responsibilities for mutual protection. Persons who use motor vehicles carelessly are criminals and must be dealt with as such, and will be taken from the highways for such period as is necessary to insure no further offenses on their part.

"It is hoped that our police will redouble their activities to this end, and that our courts will, by adequate penalties, make the criminal operator recognize the seriousness of his actions."

KLINE OPPOSES 'GAS' STATION

Opposition from Dr. George M. Kline, head of the State department of mental diseases, featured the hearing before State Fire Marshal George C. Neal on the protest against the action of the selectmen of Danvers in granting a permit for a gasoline filling station to Henry Bouchard and Cleophas Caron at Newbury and Maple sts. in that town.

Dr. Cline objected to the permit because of the danger to the mentally sick inmates of the Danvers State Hospital. The doctor regards the corner as an extremely hazardous one at any rate, but he told the fire marshal that erection of a building at the site proposed might induce mentally deficient patients to cross the street, with great danger to their safety. He said the Danvers institution has no surrounding walls and it is the desire of the State authorities to keep it in that manner.

Dr. Clarence A. Bonner, superintendent of the State Hospital at Danvers, supported Dr. Kline's contention. A large delegation of Danvers citizens also appeared in opposition and Marshal Neal took the case under advisement.

5 INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Brattleboro, Vt., June 27—Five Brattleboro persons were injured, some seriously, in an automobile accident on the road between Brattleboro and Spofford Lake, Chesterfield, N. H., and were brought to the Brattleboro Memorial Hospital.

They were occupants of a seven passenger closed car owned by Lucius H. Richardson and include Mr. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Bert E. Herrick, Mrs. Sylva Gagner, and John Madau, chauffeur.

Mr. Richardson is 84 years old and, because of his age, the shock to him is serious. He also may have a fracture of the skull. The others were badly cut and bruised and Mrs. Herrick sustained a broken collarbone.

The accident happened when the Richardson car was passing one driven by James Lyons of Brattleboro. Both were coming toward Brattleboro. It is thought a wheel on the Richardson car gave way. Nobody in the Lyons car was injured. Both machines were badly damaged.

BANISHED BUT NOT SILENCED. Leon Trotsky is barred from his native land; what nation will give him sanctuary is uncertain—but to the world he gives his life story in an amazing autobiography to be published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser starting next Sunday.

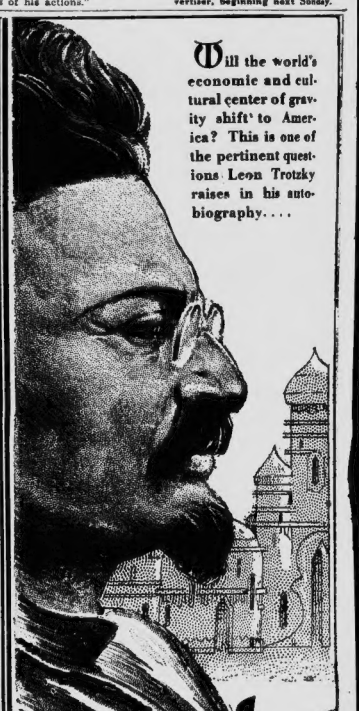
"THE THREADS OF HISTORY OFTEN GET BROKEN—IT THEN BECOMES NECESSARY TO TIE A NEW KNOT." — Leon Trotsky, writing from his Turkish exile, tells how Russia may tie a new knot. He tells the secrets of Bloody Sunday, Red October, and the downfall of the Czar. Read Trotzky's personal memoirs in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, beginning next Sunday.



Will the world's economic and cultural center of gravity shift to America? This is one of the pertinent questions Leon Trotzky raises in his autobiography....

Trotzky reveals the secrets of his life..

What does he tell of those dramatic events that drenched Russia with blood? That toppled the Czar from his throne and threw wide the doors of the Winter Palace to the heavy boots of the Bolsheviks?

From a sanitarium in Finland named Rauha, meaning peace, Trotzky wrote the inciting, blasting words that helped throw Russia into revolution! Now, writing from his exile in Turkey, Trotzky lays bare his life as a revolutionist—thirty-one years of imprisonment, exile to Siberia, escape, exile again, deportation from country to country! Hunted, his life in constant danger, he carried on . . . he still carries on!

Read the history-making events of Trotzky's life! Still working for a "Russian Utopia" he sends his message to America! Be sure to reserve your paper for the opening installment of this powerful story—

SALLY LEADER TO RETIRE TODAY

Rounding out 44 years as officers of The Salvation Army, Col. and Mrs. Stephen Marshall, commanding officers of the army in New England, retire to private life today.

Col. Stephen Marshall

This afternoon, at "Wonderland," the army's fresh-air camp at Sharon, the Colonel and Mrs. Marshall, bid farewell to the officers and soldiers whom they have commanded these past two years and a half. Following an inspection of "Wonderland," an officers' council will be held. The two leaders will personally bid each member of their charge "good-bye" and give them their last official words of advice and counsel.

This evening, at the Dudley Street Baptist Church, Roxbury, Colonel and Mrs. Marshall, will bid farewell to the public.

This meeting will be a demonstration of the high regard in which everyone holds the aged leaders. Lieut.-Gov. William S. Youngman will speak for the Commonwealth. Mayor Nichols will speak for the city; Rev. Dr. E. Hoot Talmadge, Roy M. Cushman and many others will bring messages from their organizations.

The army itself has sent its most prominent officers to give the blessing of the army. Commissioner R. E. Holz, Eastern United States commanding officer, will preside and speak for Commander Eva Booth.

A musical program will be given at the meeting by the Pawtucket and Boston staff songsters and the Cambridge and Worcester Bands.

Col. and Mrs. Marshall, who are the parents of five children, four of whom are officers in the army, have passed the legal age of retirement. They planned to retire a year ago, but remained in the harness until an auto accident in April has made it imperative that they enjoy rest and quiet. They have established their home in Asbury Park, New Jersey.

They will be succeeded here by Col. and Mrs. Joseph Atkinson of Pittsburgh, who expect to arrive here about July 10.

A car needs a home. Have you a garage for rent. Tell about it and give location in the Want Ads. That's the way to fill it.

Women Will Invest Leisure Hours

TO invest leisure hours wisely!

This is the message the General Federation of Women's Clubs hopes to get across to the two and a half million club-women of the nation next year and Mrs. John D. Sherman, chairman of the department of American home, will see to it that the project meets with consistent success throughout clubdom.

Mrs. John D. Sherman

The profound obligations that leisure carries with it will be properly stressed and since this subject is one of the two new ones added to the department its program will be both comprehensive and intensive in the first months of its adoption.

The other subject is religious training in the home, which added to well-spent leisure, Mrs. Sherman considers the two most vital factors in the consideration of the raising of the living standard in the home and the betterment of community life.

"If we are to make good homemakers and citizens," she said recently at the Biennial Council meeting and as she will undoubtedly repeat in her message to State department chairmen, "leisure is something for which we must earnestly strive. Leisure may be an enormous asset, too, for the enrichment of family and community life, and there seems to be a very distinct need to develop a general sense of definite responsibility to invest these leisure hours wisely for the embellishment of our cultural, civic, social and spiritual life.

"A home that lacks reverence and respect for the sacred things of life is a menace to the community in which it is placed. No amount of so-called culture or prosperity or refinement of environment can serve as a substitute for that which develops and enriches character and arouses in our youth the spirit of reverence for things that are holy.

"In order to present authoritative information on this subject to the clubwomen, we have conferred with the clergy. Eight denominations were represented in replies to a questionnaire and came from 86 cities scattered through 40 states. Sixteen colleges were also heard from. All seemed to agree that the example of the parents in the home was worth more than all teaching—"home atmosphere rather than home instruction"—"religion must be caught rather than taught."

"We are passing through a difficult and radical transition period. Necessary adjustments that the home may continue as a functioning social institution demand the most devoted and earnest effort that we can give it."

Mrs. Sherman will be hostess to the board of directors of the General Federation, which will be held this coming December at Fremont Temple.

BLACKBURN'S SLOOP IS LAUNCHED

Gloucester, June 27—Capt. Howard Blackburn of Gloucester, who once had an escape from death after being astray in a dory on the Grand Banks in mid-winter, has just seen the launching of a craft which Marion Cooney built for him. She is 39 feet long, 9 feet beam and is 7 feet deep, which dimensions spell a staunch sea-going craft.

As the boat slipped from the blocks to the water, Miss A. Kathleen Forbes, Blackburn's niece, broke a bottle across her bow, reciting the ritual, "I wed thee to the sea." Everything went off without mishap.

She will be sloop rigged. The spars, booms and gaffs are all ready and she probably will be ready for sea within a week, under the supervision of Capt. Blackburn, who, despite loss of hands and feet, the result of his exposure on the Banks, still manages to lend a helping hand about decks.

She has been named the "Cruising Club" after the Cruising Club of America, whose headquarters are in New York, which has elected Capt. Blackburn an honorary member. He plans to cruise about the coast and perhaps farther this summer. He has made several voyages across the Atlantic alone in a small boat.

Before his departure Capt. Blackburn will be present at the presentation to the Master Mariners' Association of this city by members of the Cruising Club of the portrait painted of him last Summer by Miss Margaret Fitzhugh Browne of Boston.

Clarissa Endicott Wolcott Weds in Emmanuel Church

Becomes Bride of Henry H. Collins, 3d. of Philadelphia.

ENDLESS BILLOWS OF WHITE tulle followed the lovely bridal figure of Clarissa Endicott Wolcott down the Emmanuel Church aisle at high noon today as she walked the flower-strewn path to marriage with Henry Hill Collins, 3d. From Philadelphia, the parental residence of her husband-to-be, had Miss Wolcott selected Miss Anna Cadwalder Roberts as her maid of honor. And, too, from that Quaker city had many of the marriage guests journeyed to throng the Newbury st. edifice to the outer portals for a glimpse of the charming bride and popular society maiden, and then, too, to add the color and dash of a society wedding.

BY HER FATHER, MR. ROGER WOLCOTT of Milton, was the bride given in holy wedlock and after the ceremony, there was a reception at the Chilton Club, where Mr. Collins and his bride received with the latter's mother, Mrs. Claire Prince Wolcott; her grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. Morton Prince, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Collins, Jr., the bridegroom's parents. For his best man, Mr. Collins had Henry D. Merrick of Philadelphia. The picturesque bridesmaids were Edith Prescott Wolcott of Milton, Mrs. Malcolm W. Greenough of Boston, Katherine Hill Collins of Philadelphia, Geraldine F. Droppers of Williamstown, Margaret B. Johnston of New York and Louisa Dresser of Worcester.

OF THE GROUP OF USHERS five were from the Quaker City and included James M. Robbins, Roland E. Roberts, Curtin Winsor, Gurdon T. Scoville and David Ewing. John Peabody upheld the honor of Boston, while the remaining other was Frank P. Matthews of New York. From Philadelphia to the Hub had Miss Katherine Robeson come to see her nephew duly wed, and when this was over and acquaintance renewals acknowledged, she prepared to visit on the North Shore with Mrs. Frank Clark Cosby of Marblehead Neck, whose house guest she is to be over the week-end.

TO BE YOUNG AGAIN IS AN inescapable desire when one sees the supple forms of the South Shore debs skipping their Cape Cod knockabouts over the waters. Lithe bodies casually wrapped in duck trousers and middies; well-shaped heads bound by brilliantly colored kerchiefs; only an assemblage of tanned Grecian features visible to the merciless rays of King Sol. The first of the mid-week series of the Cohasset Yacht Club recorded many to its calling, and I saw the McElwain sisters, Mary and Frances, busy as little bees with rigging and sails, after a race around the three-mile course. Girl-sailors they are, these charming two, and able. Marjorie Nuther, who was with them, has the healthy tan of the sun-kissed seas, too. In their own cars these young and gay skippers drive to the yacht club. And, with not much talk, either, they get their boats ready and away they sail unafraid and undaunted by rising waves.

HAPPY WAS KATHERINE JOHNSON, blonde-haired daughter of the Howard A. Johnsons, whose knockabout came in second at the races. Although the charming Katherine was crew, and brother Junior, pilot, the joy of victory was facially evident, and the girl was glad. A few drops of ocean mean nothing to this water-trained miss as her bathing suit showed. Miss Katherine has also gone in for the eye-resting bandanna fancy. And following her came Betty Blake and Alice Burrage, water sport devotees and able cruisers. I saw, too, Sally Parker and Helen Seymour, who, though not racing, fooled the sun by cruising the smiling waters off Cohasset. Miss Sally is guest with the Seymours for a few days before departure for Peterboro, N. H., the summer home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Swinnerton Parker.

FLOWERED SMOCKS TO SAVE pretty sport clothes, these two girls wore, and wise it is for those who like the water and don't mind the wet. Something new and pretty is this seashore fashion. Fannie Homans is always a pleasant sight and her smiling dimples are ever a source of flattering comment. She sailed out to the racing course alone. Fannie has the cheeriest hello to her friends and with Barbara Bremer, Frances Williams, Alma Bird, Ellen Briggs and Jean Adams, the younger group of skippers is virtually complete.

TO THE FIRST MEETING OF the Cape Ann Garden Club will patrons and matrons went their way today at 3 o'clock to hear Robert Nathan Crain lecture on "English Gardens" at the Annisquam Yacht Club. Colored slides will aid his talk. Garden artistry owes its promotion to those far-sighted matrons of elite selection whose innate love of beauty has found ample expression in the works of nature. The club, a summer group of Social Register folk, will continue to hold meetings of well-planned programs. And I find among the enlarged committee responsible for the success of the venture the names of Mrs. Henry A Wise Wood of New York, Mrs. Charles Scott, Jr., of Philadelphia, Mrs. George C. Scott Andrew and Mrs. Lawrence Brown.

BRIGHT ILLUMINATION will point out the Eastern Yacht Club, Marblehead, to the passing motorist tonight as a place of entertainment and agog. Such it will be, for the dinner dance is to be ushered in with befitting ceremony. The North Shore equerites will flock to the dance pavilion, and there, as the cool breezes carry out the syncopated strains of a tuneful orchestra, society will sway in rhythmical motion. The club's annual regatta is slated for the holiday next week, which, too, is the date of the second dinner dance.

UNIFORM CODE IS URGED IN SAFETY DRIVE

Governor's Committee to Ask Co-operation of All Cities Cities and Towns

As the first step in an organized effort to reduce the deaths and injuries caused by automobiles in Massachusetts, the governor's committee on street and highway safety met at the State House today to lay out a program of activities.

The meeting was the first attended by the full committee of 100, comprising prominent citizens, and Howard Coonley, chairman of the general and executive committees, presided.

URGE UNIFORM CODE

The executive committee is composed of Chester L. Campbell, Eben S. Draper, W. J. McDonald, A. C. Ratchesky, Edward S. Stone, Walton L. Crocker, Charles R. Gow, Frederick H. Payne, B. J. Rothwell and Russell A. Sears.

One of the first projects to be undertaken by the new organization will be an attempt to have every city and town in the State adopt a uniform municipal vehicle code, recommended by the Hoover conferences several years ago.

Another matter to receive consideration is a recodification of the amendments of the present ordinances and by-laws of the towns, so they will be consistent with the requirements of the uniform vehicle code.

It is also the announced intention of the committee to give the subject of motor vvehicle speed due consideration.

CO-OPERATION PROMISED.

The extension of the white line markings throughout the State is another feature of the program to be taken up, together with better illumination of State highways and principal traffic streets.

Governor Allen has assured the committee of co-operation from every state department, and Registrar of Motor Vehicles Parker is in close sympathy with the motivating force of the committee.

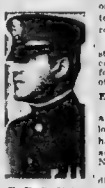
Ready for Centennial Week at Berlin, N. H.

Mayor E. R. B. McGee of Berlin, N. H., announces everything in readiness for the huge centennial celebration which takes place in that city for six days next week, beginning on Monday.

Thousands of New Englanders have already made arrangements to visit the "municipality of Progress" during the week, and there is every evidence the city will stage one of the most notable affairs of its kind ever attempted by any New England community.



E. R. B. McGee

City officials received the heartiest co-operation of the manufacturing establishments and the merchants in planning the centennial. Berlin is one of the few New England cities where it is hard to find a "to let" sign. Business there has been gaining steadily as may be noticed by the fact that the city has six state and national banks.

Located 194 miles from Boston, through the famous Pinkham Notch, 88 miles from Portland, 76 miles from Bretton Woods; 14 miles from the base of Mt. Washington; 40 miles from Dixville Notch, through which motorists may travel on a direct route and state road to Montreal, 183 miles, and Quebec, 230 miles.

On the main line of America's largest railway system, the Canadian National, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and the most important point on that system between Portland, Maine, and Montreal, P. Q.

The city is also on the main line of the Boston & Maine Railroad, with through passenger service from Boston. Outside of Boston, only two cities on the entire system furnish more business to this road than Berlin.

Among the big events to be staged during the week is the huge centennary pageant with 1000 performers, 12 bands and numerous other unusual events.

EVERYONE INVITED

The woodsmen's sports will be a great treat to the visitors. Water logging and chopping contests have already aroused the enthusiasm of hundreds of woodsmen in New England.

The people of Berlin issue a cordial invitation to tourists and vacationists who are planning a trip to the White Mountains, Quebec or Montreal to stop over in Berlin during the centenary.

Accommodations are available for thousands of people and there are over 50 hotels within about 10 miles.

Reduced round trip tickets are available on the railroads serving Berlin. Direct connections for Berlin may be made at Portland via the Boston & Maine railroad and the Canadian National, and also at points along the Maine Central.

MUSKOKA IDEAL PLAYGROUND

The four principal lakes in Muskoka are the clover leaf group—Muskoka, Rosseau and Joseph—and the upper waters, Lake of Bays, with Huntsville as focal point. It is all Muskoka, and a holiday spent there is worthwhile from every viewpoint, not only for sport and recreation, for health and rest, but for the student of botany.

A stroll through the woods fringing a sparkling lake will reward the wanderer with a glimpse of colorful blossoms arresting in beauty and fragrance.

Canoeing and camping go ideally together, as Muskoka is on the thickly forested lakes, the railways and motor roads leading to accessible gateways. Ideal canoe routes invite exploration on every hand. The most ardent Izaak Waltonite will find many beauties for his rod and the hunter a due reward, within the game laws. Muskoka is certainly an out-of-doors spot blessed as a vacation land.

About Bala on the lower waters and Trading Lake on the upper lakes is a splendid opportunity for historical study of the Red Man. In turning back the pages of time one is reminded that the Indians' birchbark craft was the first to ply these waters that are now enjoyed so extensively by tourists. All through these wooded tracts the Indians hunted and trapped—and traded.

In Muskoka are hotels aplenty varied to fit every purse. There is every modern provision to make a holiday in Muskoka a glorious and charming memory. Large boats afford long daily cruises while launches give side trips, and canoes give entrance to smaller streams. Enchanting views meet the eye at every turn.

A 10-day all-expense tour from Boston can be arranged for less than $150.

DOLLAR DAYS AT NANTASKET

Two big features loom in the program the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Co. has arranged for the 1929 season at Nantasket. One is the special Dollar Day ticket bargain and the other the entertainment being offered at the beach.

Dollar Days are each Monday and Friday. On that day all tickets each costing $1 for the round trip to Nantasket aboard one of the steamers of the company's lines include free admission to Paragon Park, free admission to 20 concessions in the park, and other advantages.

Among the features of the program is the sensational stunt of the original Wilno, "human projectile." Twice daily this week and next week he is shot from a 40-ton German howitzer, a powerful cannon He comes here direct from Germany, on his first appearance in America. There is also a free band concert.

The 10 concessions to which the special bargain ticket admits the purchaser are Giant Coaster, Red Mill, Hideaway Hall, Circle Swing, Merry-Go-Round, Whip, Custer Blue Streak, Caterpillar, and the Hey Day.

ORIGINS QUOTA EFFECTIVE ON MONDAY

Washington, June 27 (AP) A new system of determining permissible immigration into the United States, particularly European immigration, will go into operation around the borders of the United States Monday.

That is the date for the national origins amendments to the old law to become effective. The scheme devised in an attempt to apportion European immigration in accordance with the present racial character of the American population, will cut down the total European immigration materially and bring about sharp changes in the quotas of various nations.

NUMBER IS REDUCED

It will not, however, affect immigration from Canada and Mexico, now the largest source of new population aside from the national birthrate.

Under the new system, about 150,000 immigrants will be admitted annually, it is said, on the old quota basis. England and Northern Ireland, which this year were allowed 34,007 immigrants to the United States, will be permitted a total of 65,721 annually after July 1, or something like 44 per cent of the year's immigrants from Europe.

FREE STATE QUOTA CUT

Germany will be allowed 25,957 immigrants instead of 51,227. Irish Free State, 17,853 instead of 28,567. Sweden, 3314 against 9561. Norway, 2377 against 6453. Denmark, 1181 against 2789. Poland 6524 against 5982. Belgium, 1304 against 512, and Italy, 5802 against 3845. Most of the other nations will be held to the arbitrary minimum allowance of 100 a year.

Immigration service officials expect the large increase in allotment to Great Britain to be fully used. Under the expiring quota system, applications for passports by intending British immigrants have so far exceeded the allotment that they have been granted for two years ahead. The increase awarded to Italy under the new system also will be quickly filled up.

When Joseph Roy of Hall st., Waltham, left home recently to take a job in another city, he assured his wife he would return soon to take her with him.

The hand of death, however, has intervened and when Roy does return it will be to a home of bereavement.

While relatives made unavailing efforts to find the husband, Mrs Louise M. Roy was laid to rest in her grave yesterday. She died Sunday night before her husband had sent back any word of his whereabouts.

When he left home, Roy said that his destination was Attleboro, but did not give the place of employment. He is due back July 4.

Asa Keyes' Accuser Bribed Is Charge

Los Angeles, June 27 (INS) Charged with accepting bribes, Milton Pike, important witness in the state's successful effort to convict former Dist. Atty. Asa Keyes of conspiracy and bribe charges, was under arrest here today. Pike is alleged to have accepted a bribe to change his testimony in the forthcoming trial of Harold L. Davis, former chief deputy under Keyes.

MRS. HOOVER'S ACT APPROVED BY BISHOP

Washington, June 27 (INS)—In the general chorus of criticism going up from southern legislatures and from southern spokesmen over Mrs. Herbert Hoover entertaining Mrs. Oscar De Priest, wife of a negro congressman at the White House came a letter of praise for her action today.

Bishop William Montgomery Brown, who was tried and convicted of heresy before an ecclesiastical court of Episcopal bishops at Cleveland several years ago, has written a letter endorsing Mrs. Hoover's action, and criticising the churches for their attitude toward the negroes. Bishop Brown was formerly bishop of Arkansas.

"If" he wrote, "the Christian churches had been in the slightest degree interested in the teachings of Jesus as they are set down in the New Testament their members could not possibly make such race distinctions, and encourage one race stupidly trying to keep another race in subjection, not because of any harm which the subjected race had done to it, but simply to maintain an economic advantage and satisfy its own sense of race superiority.

"I do not blame a savage for being a savage. I wish merely to point out that they are savages as to the drawing of race distinctions. I was a savage myself while I was bishop of Arkansas."

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the Fee Rent columns.

Wife of New Baron Will Be Known as Mrs. Sidney Webb

London, June 27 (AP)—The London Daily Mail said today Beatrice Webb, wife of Sidney Webb, and his collaborator in many works of sociology and economics, would continue to be known as "Mrs. Sidney Webb," disregarding the title automatically conferred upon her through the raising of her husband to the peerage.

FAMED ARC DE TRIUMPHE HAS AN ELEVATOR

Paris, June 27 (INS)—The Arc de Triomphe, under which the tomb of France's unknown soldier lies, is now modernized by the completion of an elevator leading to its lofty summit.

This magnificent arch, which stands at the head of one of the greatest thoroughfares in the world, the Champs Elysees, has previously offered the vista from its top only to those willing to climb 218 steps.

The one disadvantage of the elevator is that it disposes of one more obstacle to individuals who would commit suicide by jumping from the dizzy heights of the monument, which rivals the Eiffel Tower as a jumping-off place.

In order to prevent de luxe suicides who would be too lazy to walk up and jump over, but to whom the elevator simplifies the whole matter, a guard will be kept on duty constantly.

100 RAIL FORTS TO DEFEND COAST

Washington, June 27 (INS)—Plans for developing a coastal chain of about 100 firing stations, auxiliary forts for the recently developed railway artillery, at an approximate cost of $100,000,000, are being studied by the War Department.

Plans call for linking secondary defense posts on Delaware bay and New York harbor with stations along the seaboard. A survey of Delaware bay has led army engineers to estimate $100,000 will be required for the establishment of firing posts there.

The purpose of the plan is to make possible rapid shifting of 14-inch guns to any section of the coast which might be threatened by hostile fleets. The guns are capable of hurling one-ton projectiles at the rate of one a minute a distance of 30 miles to sea.

This armament, cost of which is not included in the $100,000,000 estimate for firing posts, would supplement the established 21 fixed harbor defenses and 65 forts.

Aunt Ella Goes to Yosemite on a Promised Trip With Nancy

What Has Gone Before

Nancy Hollenbeck, young and beautiful, pursued by Mat Tully, is warned by her mother not to wed a poor man. Nancy fellows her mother's advice and turns Mat down.

She yearns for the pretty things that the girls of wealth possess. She makes up her mind to catch Jack Beamer, rich but married. That word, married, does not trouble Nancy. He can give her what she wants. Nancy walks in the grove with Beamer, who is infatuated. Maternal sister Louise, searching for Nancy and Beamer, find the two hugging and kissing 'neath the trees.

Nancy gets in at 3 a. m. and is afraid Mrs. Craig will find out about her escapade with Beamer. Louise accuses Nancy and asks her if she wants to figure in a divorce suit named by Mrs. Beamer.

Nancy tells Louise that it would be easy to fall in love with Beamer, that his wife didn't love him and that a divorce might be had.

Nancy and Louise are invited to visit the Yosemite Valley by their rich aunt, Ellie Watson. Beamer phones Nancy and tells her he will sue his wife for a divorce.

(Now Go On With the Story)

CHAPTER 7

JACK BEAMER telephoned twice in the next two days. Nancy talked to him for twenty minutes at a time, long secret conversations, her mouth close to the phone, the hand that held the receiver cold and moist.

"Who was it, Nancy?" mama wanted to know, as usual.

"Oh, just one of the boys."

That would not have been enough ordinarily, but what with waiting on Aunt Ellie, who had to have warm milk or an egg every two hours, and helping the girls get ready for Yosemite, mama wasn't quite herself.

Papa wasn't well, either. After that first long, roundabout talk with Aunt Ellie he seemed to sense the futility of expecting financial help from her. Every night after dinner he would make a pretense of looking over his mail. Bills. Dunning letters. The only mail he ever got except once in a while a lodge notice, or a thin, cheap envelope addressed in faded ink, probably another dun from one of his poor relations. But he hardly looked at them any more, and when Nancy wanted a pair of the new velvet kid slippers to take with her on the trip he agreed without a murmur.

Mama worried a little over him, but gentleman took bills over seriously, and besides, something would turn up. He did look would be

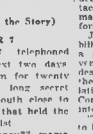
The Curious Quizzer

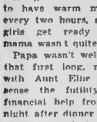
Dorchester Folk Answer His Daily Question and Pose for Pictures.

THE QUESTION

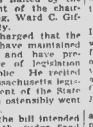
Do you think the sale of fireworks of any description should be prohibited to children under 15 years of age?



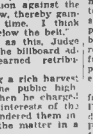
EDWARD F. SLATTERY, King st.—Boys or girls under the age of 16 are too young to have fireworks. Small children do not realize the danger from handling some of the fireworks they may purchase. Little tots and some of the older children under 15 set off cracker-ball and torpedoes but enjoy the sound of a big noise. The sale of fireworks to them should be prohibited.



MISS KATHERINE F. KIVLAN, Woodward ave.—One year ago, on the Fourth of July, a little girl of 11 died from burns she received when lighting a Roman candle purchased here in Dorchester by her four year old brother. If there was a law against selling fireworks to children of tender years, such a terrible accident could not have happened. The careless handling of fireworks by children many lives have been lost. I am in favor of allowing dealers in fireworks to sell to grownups, but they should be prohibited by law from selling fireworks, even to children under 16.



ROBERT M. COMISKEY, Arlington st.—State authorities, I understand, are making a drive against the sale of many kinds of small but high-powered explosive fireworks such as may be bought by any one with the price. All fireworks in the hands of children I think the firecracker is the most dangerous. Unless a child has a note with a permission of the parent, in my opinion, there should be a law making it a crime to sell the dangerous fireworks to any child under 14 years of age.



MRS. MARIE L. BARNES, Woodward ave.—Fireworks of any description and especially the powerful two-inch salutes which are so dangerous should be sold only to responsible persons. A child of 10 or 12 may buy them now at some of the shacks along the roadsides. Licenses to sell fireworks should be revoked by the police at such places where little children are seen spending money for something that may endanger their lives.

"GOO-GOOS" TO BACK PETERS FOR MAYOR

BILLBOARD ATTACK BY JURIST

Judge Robert Walcott of Cambridge, backed by representatives of many women's clubs and other organizations, assailed outdoor billboard advertisers in no uncertain terms at the session of the National Association of Real Estate Boards convention at the Copley-Plaza. His observations, which were later criticized by representatives of the Outdoor Advertising Association, precipitated a near debate, which was halted by the tactful management of the chairman of the meeting, Ward C. Gifford of Kansas City.

Judge Walcott charged that the billboard interests have maintained a powerful lobby and have prevented the passage of legislation desired by the public. He recited the tale of the Massachusetts legislation, an amendment of the State Constitution, which ostensibly went into effect in 1923.

"The makers of the bill intended to be liberal," said the judge, "and gave these people a fair show, so they provided that the billboard people might have until 1925 to get their signs down. Instead of taking their signs down, however, they waited until two days before the time limit was to expire, and then secured an injunction against the operation of the law, thereby gaining two years in time. I think that was hitting below the belt."

By such actions as this, Judge Walcott declared, the billboard advertisers have "earned retribution."

"They are reaping a rich harvest out of defacing the public highways," he said. Then he charged that the financial interests of the men in question rendered them incapable of seeing the matter in a clear light.

The gentlemen in Massachusetts who engage in billboard advertising are Harvard graduates but that gets us nothing," he remarked.

He asserted that Massachusetts roads are worse disfigured by billboards than those of any other state, and he said that in his opinion he was supported by other widely traveled persons.

The women talked about "boycotting" those firms which advertise by means of unsightly billboards, and it was obvious from the casual way in which they said it that the idea was not new to them.

Plan Bronze Statue of Great Race Horse

Frankfort, Ky., June 27—Plans to immortalize Man O' War by having made a life size bronze of the famous race horse from a model by the sculptor, F. G. P. Roth, were disclosed here by Governor Flem D. Sampson. The consent of Samuel D. Riddle, owner of Man O' War, has been obtained, subject to arrangements being made with Miss Elizabeth Daingerfield, horse trainer, who has charge of Man O' War, as to the time the modeling is to be done.

It is planned to have the bronze cast from the sculptor's model placed at the Churchill Downs, the course over which the historic Kentucky Derby is run annually. Man O' War is now in stud at the Daingerfield Farm near Lexington.

Four Fliers Escape Injury in Crash

New London, Ct., June 27— C. Francis Jenkins, television expert of New York and Washington, narrowly escaped injury today himself and three passengers when he crashed in an airplane, while making a forced landing. Jenkins was flying to Boston from New York in his own plane with three friends. Near here he noticed his gas supply was running low and glided for a beach. Unable to make the beach he glided between two houses and struck rocky ground. The engine was partly ripped from its base and the fuselage torn. No one in the party was injured.

Recovers Body in His Fishing Net

Leroy Ross, 31, a fisherman, of 31 Princeton st., East Boston, recovered the body of Joseph McPhee, 28, of 436 Chelsea st., East Boston, who was drowned last Wednesday. The body caught in his net while he was dragging for groundfish off Winthrop. It was claimed last night at the North Grove st. mortuary by McPhee's mother. The young man was drowned when a boat in which he had been fishing with two friends overturned off Shirley gut. The other two men were rescued.

TELLS OF SEE PETERS KISSES ON STAND AS CURLEY OPPONENT

More and interesting details of the friendship between Joseph J. Galvin and Miss Anna Gibbons of Hemenway st., Back Bay, who are expected today when trial of the woman's suit for $25,000 heart balm is resumed in Suffolk Probate Court.

Galvin, on the witness stand before Judge Walsh and a jury, testified that he had been on a spree when he first met Miss Gibbons.

He had never met her before, he said, until that day in 1921, when he was introduced to her at the Bass Point House in Nahant.

"You were in your bathing suit" he was asked by Francis J. Monahan, counsel for Miss Gibbons.

"Yes."

"On that occasion I understand you showed some affection?"

"Yes," he admitted.

"On that occasion, although you had met her for the first time she permitted those liberties?" "Yes."

"From that time on you saw the plaintiff almost every night until you went to Oak Bluffs?" "Yes."

"In that time you continued to remain in your mind a good girl and on the square?" "Yes."

"Do you know whether you kissed her on the first occasion?"

"I did," he replied laconically.

Galvin admitted that a fur coat which was shown to him looked very much like one for which he had furnished the money. He said that they were at a cabin and that he had 10 $100 bills and that he observed later that he had only five of these left. "I believe I did give her some money," he said. She says I did. I was intoxicated.

The Good Government Association threatens to throw a monkey-wrench into the mayoralty plans of the Democratic party in Boston by espousing the cause of Former Mayor Andrew J. Peters.

While the "Goo-Goos" have not formally announced their endorsement of Former Mayor Peters, it is understood that such an endorsement is planned.

Officers of the "Goo-Goos" feel that Peters is the only available candidate they can support to make the fight against Former Mayor James M. Curley, but the difficulty comes from the fact that Peters does not seek, in fact does not want the nomination.

Peters would like to carry the Democratic standard in the next gubernatorial campaign, and neither he nor any other Democrat is taken up with the idea of opposing Curley, whose strength is unquestioned.

At the same time certain prominent Democrats have signed a petition, which has been circulated by Whitfield Tuck, asking Peters to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

The gubernatorial nomination has been supposed to be the goal of Peters for some time, and there has been a fairly definite movement since the last State and national election, with some of the most prominent Democrats heading it, to straighten out the party lines so that Peters would get the place at the head of the State ticket.

QUOTA CLUBS AT CONVENTION

Worcester, June 27. Delegates to the 10th annual convention of Quota International, Inc., were welcomed to the city at a meeting in Chamber of Commerce Hall by Mayor O'Hara. The response was given by Juliette A. Southard, president of the New York club.

N. Myra Glazer, president of the Worcester club, also welcomed the visitors and the response to her was given by Bertha U. Perry of Denver.

The Rev. Dr. Rietta M. Emerson of Wilmington, Del., national president and the only licensed preacher in Quota, reported that steps have been taken to organize a Quota club in London, Eng., and she presented charters to the representatives of the following new Quota clubs: Pueblo, Colo., organized April 15; Omaha, Neb., organized April 20, and Atlanta, Ga., organized June 6.

NINE DOCTORS GET DEGREES

Nine brand-new doctors of medicine were graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Boston at the 50th annual commencement exercises of that institution at the Parker House.

JENSEN'S WIFE AIDS AS PILOT

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., June 27 (AP) With his wife at his side, Martin Jensen, in the monoplane Three Musketeers, today was making his third attempt at a refueling endurance record.

Taking off at 7:32 o'clock last night, he must remain in the air one hour longer than the record of 17 hours 32 minutes and 1 second, set May 26 by R. L. Robbins and James Kelly in the plane Ft. Worth.

Jensen will refuel in the air twice a day through a pipe line from a plane flying overhead.

His wife, an auburn-haired young woman of 26, holds a private pilot's license and planned to take her turn at the controls. A third member of the crew was William Tibbets, a veteran pilot, who also took part in Jensen's previous attempts.

Denies King of Albania Has Cancer

Vienna, June 27 (INS)—Denial that Ahmed Zogu, King of Albania, is suffering from cancer of the throat or any other serious illness was forthcoming from two sources today.

Prof. Guido Holzknecht, famous X-ray expert, who treated the monarch some months ago and who is in constant touch with Tirana, the Albanian capital, ridiculed the reports.

CLAM DIGGERS BEAT CAPTORS

Two game wardens were beaten and their service revolvers taken from them by clam diggers at the end of a chase from the flats of the Saugus river to Pines river, Point of Pines, Revere.

A 15-year-old boy, John Gallo, of Lannery road, Revere was arrested, and will be arraigned in Saugus court on a charge of digging clams in a condemned area.

Warden Henry F. Parmlee of Lynn and his deputies, Orrin Allen and Holger Smith, came upon five men and four boys digging the bivalves in the Saugus river flats. The gang scattered with the game wardens in pursuit.

The diggers were picked up by a motorist and carried toward Revere. Near the Pines river the clamdiggers got out of the car. Allen and Smith placed handcuffs on one of the men. Then the two wardens were set upon.

NATIONAL GUARD AVIATOR PLANS SIX-STATE FLIGHT IN HALF DAY

COL. SWAN TO BE Y. D. COURIER

Col. Carroll J. Swan, chairman of the invitation committee of the Yankee division overseas memorial committee, will visit each of the six New England governors by airplane on their respective capitals Friday to personally extend the committee's invitation to accompany the 26th division pilgrimage to France, September 26.

Col. Swan will make the delicious airplane trip starting at 8 a.m. Friday from the Back Bay Boston airport in a plane to be piloted by Lieut. Crocker Snow of the 26th division air service, M. N. G.

The trip, which has been carefully planned by Lieut. Snow, will be one of the most daring and unique trips ever started from the Boston airport. It will be the first time that any pilot has ever attempted to visit all the capital cities of New England in the same day, and will blaze the trail for what will some day be a permanent air route. The entire journey, a distance of nearly 650 miles, will be made in 10 hours 45 minutes, it is figured, if weather conditions are favorable. The actual flying time will be 7 hours 30 minutes or more than a mile and a half a minute for 445 minutes.

The schedule of the plane is as follows: Leave Boston 8 a. m., arrive Concord, N. H., 8.45, leave 9, arrive Augusta, Me., 10.30; leave 11, arrive Montpelier, Vt., 12.05, leave 1.30 p. m., arrive Hartford, 3.40; leave 4.20, arrive Providence, 5, leave 5.45, arrive Norwood, 6.10, leave 6.30, arrive East Boston airport, 6.45 (daylight saving time).

The party will be met by the governor of the State on each of the airport. Because of time of return to Boston being after office hours the plane will remain at the airport in Norwood, home town of Governor Frank C. Allen.

Crocker Snow, who will pilot the plane, is one of the most skilful aviators in New England. He was too young to enter the service during the war, but is now a first lieutenant in the 26th division air service, M. N. G.

Scenes in Two Plane Crashes Where Four Were Killed and Seven Hurt

Legal Experts Say Hoover Cannot Name Board Now

Washington, June 27—Legal experts here hold that President Hoover has no legal authority to appoint the members of the federal farm board provided for in the relief bill until Congress reconvenes.

This conclusion is based on an opinion handed down by United States Atty.-Gen. Philander C. Knox in 1901, in the New York appointees case.

Knox held that the President is not authorized to appoint during "a current holiday adjournment of the Senate, which will have the effect of an appointment made in the recess occupying between two sessions of the Senate."

The further question, as to the authority of the members of the board, if the President does appoint, to use any of the $15,000,000 provided for the revolving fund, has arisen, and is being discussed.

New Hampshire Man Urged for Farm Board

Concord, N. H. June 26—Farm leaders generally throughout New England are concentrating their efforts on the appointment of a New Hampshire man, George M. Putnam of Contoocook, as their representative on the federal farm board, expected to be named shortly by President Hoover. It was learned today with the departure of Putnam for Chicago and Washington.

The new board provided for by the farm relief bill recently made a law, will consist of eight members appointed by the President, with annual salaries of $12,000.

Putnam has the support of the New England Milk Producers' Association, the Massachusetts Farm Bureau Federation, the county farm bureaus of his own state, the Merrimack Farmers' Exchange, which is one of the largest co-operative buying groups in the nation; the Association of Vermont Creameries, and various farm units throughout the country.

Recently Raymond Dickinson of Amherst, president of the Massachusetts Farm Bureau Federation, publicly indorsed his man a qualified candidate for the post.

EDISON EXAMS FOR BAY STATE TOMORROW

[illegible] and members of the faculty of high and preparatory [illegible] are interested [illegible] examinations to be held at the State House tomorrow, when a student will be chosen to represent Massachusetts as a candidate for a Thomas A. Edison scientific scholarship.

Seven Massachusetts students have been chosen to take the examination and they represent high or preparatory schools in various sections of the State. One student from each State will be chosen and one from the District of Columbia. These 49 students will go to the Edison Laboratories at West Orange, N. J., for a personal interview with Thomas A. Edison, and he will determine the one who is to receive the scholarship. The students will go to the laboratories at Edison's expense.

In effect, the four-year scholarship for some outstanding American boy who has excelled in scholastic [illegible] during his preschool year Mr. Edison felt that it was impossible to make the selections himself. Therefore he wrote letters to Governors of the States suggesting that the State boards of education designate a boy to represent each State.

Five of the boys selected to take the examination tomorrow at the State House are from Greater Boston. They are Morris Cohen, Chelsea; Frederick Ireland, Cambridge; Cole A. Allen, Boston; Melville Ehrlich, Winthrop, and Richard C. Molloy, Boston.

The other 10 Massachusetts boys are: George P. Bentley, Quincy; Merrill S. Friend Gloucester, William A. Kilbourn, Groton, Raymond L. Sunken Isle of Dream Found in Pacific

Cleveland, O., June 27—Fortune has favored M. F. Bramley, Cleveland paving magnate, in his quest of a sunken island in the Pacific, for which he set out from Boston in his yacht, the Perry, last February.

A letter to John H. Ivey, commodore of the Cleveland Motor Boat Yachting Association received today, announced that Bramley had found the island, which he claimed he visioned in a dream.

The letter said Bramley had purchased from the government a large concrete boat to sink on the reef as filler for his island.

Bramley's sunken island is said to be located in the Pacific, 100 miles from San Diego, Cal., and 100 miles also from San Pedro. The locality is known to seamen as Cortes shoals. The island is said to be in water from 40 to 50 fathoms deep. A large area of rocks, however, comes within 10 or 15 feet of the surface.

Reports indicated Bramley will construct a breakwater and pump it full of sand for the ocean bottom to fill the island.

SHE IS ONE, BUT DIDN'T KNOW IT

Brockton, June 27—Mrs. Lee's Almena Colby of Brockton, a Nova Scotian, but married to an American citizen by marriage, came to Americanize, petitioned Judge Edward T. Broadhurst in naturalization court here for another ticket to citizenship and was rejected.

The dismissal of her petition was simply a reminder that she already possessed naturalization in the United States and did not know it.

Judge Broadhurst reminded her that her first marriage back in 1919 to an American-born automatically made her a citizen and there was any doubt of that her second marriage since to an alien American surely sealed the bargain.

Youth Drives 900 Miles to Beverly in 32 Hours

Beverly, June 27—Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jacobson, 24 Lathrop st., are telling friends of the stunt of their young relative, Ernest Washom of Columbus, O., who arrived here in a small roadster from his home town, making the approximately 900 miles between the two cities in 32 hours. This 21-year-old youth was graduated last week from Ohio State University.

The Flanagan boy was playing near World War Memorial Park when he rolled down an incline onto the tracks. Motorman Goodall saw him and tried to bring his train to a stop, but the boy was struck.

NEPONSET SPAN WORK RUSHED

In order to speed up traffic over Neponset Bridge, the Metropolitan District Commission has started to cut the wings of the draw into four parts if it is now in two so that half of the bridge may be in use while the other half is closed.

Heretofore when the draw was opened, traffic was tied up completely, because the draw only had two wings which were pulled up on hinges when the draw was opened. By splitting each of these two wings, it will be possible to use one-half of the draw while the other half is closed.

Edwin H. Rogers, engineer for the commission, who is in charge of the work, expects to have everything completed this week.

The convicts refused to work, assembling in the main yard of the prison, shouting and screaming until finally Sengalese soldiers drove them to their cells.

It was said the comparative hilarity of Devils Island proved attractive to the prisoners in comparison with the heavy labor imposed upon them at the prison here.

EARLY NAVAL ARMAMENT LIMITATION PARLEY IN LONDON LOOMS

5 POWERS TO TAKE PART

Washington, June 27– Progress of conversations now taking place in London with a view to arranging for further naval armament limitations indicate that the conference will take place in London in the near future

French and Japanese ambassadors and the Italian charge d'affaires are participating with Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister of Great Britain, and other British officials, and Ambassadors Dawes and Gibson representing the United States in the present informal discussion.

Participation by French, Italian and Japanese diplomatic representatives had not hitherto been disclosed.

TWO BIG ISSUES

The two major points for preliminary settlement now under discussion in London between the representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan are:

1—Shall there first be a meeting of civilian political negotiators to determine the scope and character of the conference or shall the naval experts of the several powers meet prior to the meeting of the civilians to discuss the so-called yardstick for measuring relative naval values?

2—Shall the scope of the conference be limited to (a) cruisers, or (b) battleships and cruisers, or (c) be unlimited so that the conference would deal with reducing all classes of combatant naval vessels, capital ships (battleships and airplane carriers), cruisers, destroyers and submarines?

When definite basis for holding the formal disarmament conference has been reached Prime Minister MacDonald will make his projected visit to the United States for the purpose of discussing the naval armament question with President Hoover.

Prime Minister MacDonald has taken the initiative in the situation, much to the satisfaction of the Washington government. He seems to have entered wholeheartedly into President Hoover's desire for the armament conference.

The entrance of the French, Italian and Japanese diplomatic initiatives in London into the exchanges between Prime Minister MacDonald and Ambassador Dawes, and, subsequently Ambassador Gibson, is in accord with the desire of the American and British governments that the proposed armament reduction should be undertaken by all the five naval powers.

ANNOUNCEMENT SOON

The Hoover administration favors a special conference of the five naval powers. This method furnishes greater assurance of quick action and that is something at which the administration is aiming. The London exchanges have taken a slant indicative of the calling of a separate conference.

It is the expectation that the preliminaries now being conducted in London will advance so rapidly that a definite announcement of their outcome will be made in a few days.

In his speech Tuesday night Prime Minister MacDonald intimated that he might be in a position in a few days to announce the meeting place of a disarmament conference and its objects. That information accords with what has been received here.

The whole situation as revealed in information reaching Washington is propitious for a special naval conference in the near future.

Wife of Real Estate Man Secures Divorce

Mrs. Ann M. Smith of Swampscott is seeking a divorce in the Middlesex probate court at East Cambridge from Alpheus B. Smith, a prominent Cambridge real estate man. She testified that trouble between them developed when she suspected him of paying attention to other women.

They were married in Lynn June 5, 1906, and she charged that he deserted her in Cambridge March 20, 1918. While Smith did not contest his wife's action, a stipulation was filed as to alimony, and Judge C. C. Campbell, who heard the case, said a decree would be entered in accordance with the agreement filed. The couple have one child, Doris, who was born in 1911.

Plan for Capital Peacocks Hits Snag

Washington, June 27—The ambitious dream of Lt.-Col. U. S. Grant, 3d, director of public buildings and grounds, of colonizing the park surrounding Mirror pool in the shadow of the Lincoln Memorial with gorgeous proudly strutting peacocks hit the hard rocks of reality.

A contract for purchase of a dozen of the royal birds had been let, tentatively, but was recalled when it was found no precedent for such a purchase existed.

Driving Wolf Away

James Aicardi George Sumpter, Jr.

The appeal for aid for the family of George Sumpter, Spanish War veteran, published in Boston Evening American, has brought many responses. As a result, Sumpter's son, George, Jr., has been employed in the I-Car-De mayonnaise plant in Dorchester, the head of firm, James Aicardi, having read of the family's plight and offered George the job to help out. (Staff photo.)

NEEDY VETERAN AND FAMILY AIDED

An appeal for work by George Sumpter, 50, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, and two of his six children, whose home at 35 Rand st., Roxbury, was about to be broken up for lack of money, was published in Tuesday's Boston Evening American

Today the appeal brought response, as readers have come forward to aid the family with provisions, groceries and a job at $12 a week for the oldest boy, George, Jr. He has begun work in the packing room of the I-Car-De Mayonnaise Co., near Upham's Corner, Dorchester.

James Aicardi, manager of the firm, after reading of Sumpter's inability to find jobs for himself and his two boys immediately sent for them to join his large staff of employes. When the boys appeared at the plant it was believed that John was not rugged enough for the position, but George was put to work. On being assured of work, young George, with tears in his eyes, thanked Aicardi for the chance to keep his brothers and sisters together with their parents.

Other readers of the Boston Evening American called at the Sumpter home and promised to try and find positions for the father and the second oldest boy, John. One little girl called at the house and brought a package of thousands of matches, and 15 cents in pennies for Sumpter. Before he had a chance to thank her for her gift the girl ran away.

LITTLE BASES DIVORCE ON DESERTION

Lived in Same House, But Without Tranquility, He Says in Suit

Ann Harbor, Mich., June 27– Loss of the tranquility of the home although there was no separation in law as legal desertion is the basis of the divorce suit in which Dr. Clarence Cook Little, retiring president of the University of Michigan, has filed against Katherine Dee Little.

The complaint filed in Washtenaw County Circuit Court on June 18, but removed from the files of the clerk's office by Dr. Little's attorneys Cassmuth and Burke was returned by George Burke. He wished to set at rest rumors that sensational charges had been made in the complaint, he said.

Mrs. Little's answer was filed by J. O. Murfin, her attorney.

The complaint does not mention a financial settlement, or the custody of the children.

Two of the three children are 14 or more and are at liberty to choose with which parent they wish to make their home. These children are Louise and Edward Revere Little. The third child, Robert Day Little, will be 14 in September and then will have the right of selection. The question of the custody of the children has not been discussed between Dr. and Mrs. Little, Burke said.

Burke said a property arrangement had been reached, but will not be made final until the divorce decree is signed. He refused to reveal the amount.

Burke denied that the trouble lay in an inability on Mrs. Little's part to adjust herself to the Middle-Western social atmosphere. The entire case is explained in the suit as one of desertion, he said.

All papers in the case will be made public immediately, Burke said, after explaining his client was seeking a divorce on the premise that though living in the same house without domestic tranquility." Mrs. Little had legally deserted her husband more than 10 years ago.

WHERE DO ALL THE ANTIQUES COME FROM? Is there any real supply of genuine old furniture and brica-brac? Will the fad for these articles finally be "played out"? Several interesting things to say about collectors and collections in next Sunday's Boston Advertiser.

Girl's Natural With Honest Dice Break Chicago Aces

Chicago, Ill., June 27– Throwing naturals with honest dice is easy for Virginia Nichols, 20-year-old blonde divorcee from St. Louis, and police learned that she has had several of Chicago's amateur and semi-professional gamblers crying for help, it developed when she was taken to police headquarters.

At the station Virginia did something that marks her as an artist—she took money from sleepy-eyed detectives who just could not believe anyone was able to throw so many naturals with a pair of honest dice.

About a week ago Miss Nichols brought her pony breadbasket and her baby smile to the environs and wise guys checked in at a downtown hotel and prepared to take the crapshooters into camp. She was not aggressive, or even insistent.

The nice gentlemen who dropped in to see her obligingly taught her the fine points of the game, and they would start to play, just for a small amount to make it interesting. It wasn't long generally before her bed-mates left with empty pockets and blank stares.

There was a thing crossed about Virginia's crapshooting. She used a pair of dice preferable those of her playmates. But she is a past master at the old blanket roll, an art known to few. A firm grip, a little manipulation, and the cubes would tumble out on a blanket and sevens would peep up at the bewildered gamblers with sickening integrity.

Former Governor of Maine Tells of His Study Into Jobless Problem

Washington, June 27– Ralph C. Brewster, former governor of Maine, discussed the unemployment problem with President Hoover.

Brewster, who has been making an extensive study of unemployment in collaboration with others, presented to the President a statistical compilation of the laws of all the states bearing on unemployment and a copy of a model law governing unemployment designed for adoption by the various states.

The compilation was made by Prof. J. E. Landis of Harvard law school and will come up for discussion at the forthcoming conference of governors of New London, Ct., in July and also at the Williamstown, Mass., Institute of Politics.

Meantime, according to Brewster, copies of the compilation and the model law have been sent to the governors of the states for consideration. The President, who had been invited to address the governors' conference, has found it impossible to attend, Brewster said. He added that the President is greatly interested in the whole unemployment problem.

Senator Heflin of Alabama urged upon the President the claim of the South to two places on the new federal farm board. He suggested for places on the board the names of Charles G. Harrett of Union City, Ga., and Washington, D. C., former president of the American Farm Union; Edward O'Neill of Montgomery, Ala., vice-president of the Federal Farm Co-operative Association, and Jesse Thompson of Birmingham, owner of large farm estates.

Copenhagen, June 27—Hope for the safety of the great sailing ship Kobenhaven, with 60 Danish cadets aboard, was abandoned officially when the government was notified that the missing vessel had been seen in wreckage on the Island of Tristan Da Cunha, far in the South Atlantic.

George Dawson, Chicago amateur and brother of Johnny, the British finalist, got 38 for the first nine. He played with Eugene Lawkin, Chevy Chase, Md., who needed all of 45 strokes to the turn. Fred Baroni, Conneaut Lake, Pa., had a 37; Jack Forrester, Oradel, N. J., a 40, and Billy Burke, Westport, N. Y., a par 36, at this point. Dawson and MacKenzie, both amateurs, were the only early contestants to get birdies at the fearsome eighth hole. MacKenzie was hitting them far and handsome but not wide.

Most of the nine-hole totals were wider than a bartender's smile, however. Willie Ogg, Worcester, Mass., was 41 to the turn and Al Watrous, who once finished third in the British open, was 40. He was left with a lie so bad that he was forced to play safe to the fairway. Ultimately, he picked a 6. Farrell followed with a fizzard 4 at the third where he pitched his tee shot into a trap at the side of the green.

JONES IN TROUBLE

Jones, meantime, recovered neither weekly nor too well from the trap at the first and finally took a 6. He was even par at the second with a 4 but followed with a 5 at the short third, making him four strokes over par to this point.

Diegel hit his stride after the second hole, however, and raced to the turn in 35, one under par. He was three strokes better than even fours for the final seven holes of nine. MILK FUND SHOW HEADLINERS READY TO GO!

SENATORS HERE FOR THREE-DAY STAY

THE Red Sox are home to scamper around the Fenway for a quartet of ball games. They open with the Washington Senators this afternoon, and play three games to wind up the week and get in shape for the big crowd clash with the Yanks on Sunday.

It was a battered, so to speak, flock of athletes that Bill Carrigan steered back to the Back Bay pasture; a team that has been biffed and bumped quite severely on the hostile trails.

The matter of games won and lost means nothing now. Bill hopes to get his pitchers going in order, while a few friendly crowds are around to cheer. The Sox have been losing the eastern part of the circuit, which is the tough part. They will do much better when the western clubs are encountered out on the trails a little later on.

MISTER CARRIGAN refuses to get entirely pessimistic.

"We lost quite a few tough games. Our pitching wasn't what it should have been, but when we did get a well-pitched game, we couldn't do a bit of hitting. The boys might be discouraged, but they're not.

"They still hustle and try and a team that does that isn't licked. There's still hope. All we need is a little break in luck and a short winning streak to make the team look a whole lot better.

"It's a long road down to October. We're in the cellar now, but that's no proof we'll be there when the curtain goes down."

BOSTON fans are hungry for baseball. That was evident in the daily increasing crowds while the Braves were putting on their little parade. There was a goodly gang present at the colorous windup, some 8000 fans. And it was to be observed that there was no booing or razzing, while the natives were tossing away a couple of ball games. The fans remembered the good games.

The same friendly spirit will be brought to the Fenway. All the team has to do is to play baseball, and go along at a .500 gait. Then the turnstiles will click merrily, which, sad to relate, they haven't been this year.

THE SOX return with the idea that the Athletics will win the A. L. pennant. Naturally, they would think so, as they have just been facing the devastating power of that ball club. The same impression, incidentally, exists throughout the baseball world, except perhaps in the minds of the Yanks, or of their rooters.

While the Sox are here, the Braves will be battling with the Dodgers over in Brooklyn. They smeared that club here, and hope to repeat in Flatbush. They must do something to remove the effects of their last two stands in these parts.

Course Fit for Open Golf Title Tilt

By JOHNNY FARRELL
American Open Golf Champion

MAMARONECK, N. Y., June 27—That great American agitation, the national open championship, is with us again.

A flashy field of 336 golfers ... called from every section of the United States, set forth this morning over the exacting Winged Foot Golf Club's links, after the richest golf bauble in the world. Hopes are flaring high.

In three days I will either greet my success and join the select flock of former open champions or else I will break a 17-year-old precedent by coming through again. As tee time approaches I am none too sanguine about my own fortunes.

The battle ground is playing very fast and so is the army of professionals and amateurs that have been practising furiously this past week and more.

The odds are very heavy against any individual. I realize that. Therefore, I am not going to try too hard. Over-zealousness has lost many a championship.

Lynn, New Bedford and Portland should win today, while the Lewiston-Manchester game is a tossup.

LYNN NINE IS HALTED

By CHARLES ROFFMAN

The fast traveling New Bedford pilots stopped the Lynn team's winning streak when they took the league leaders into camp, 8 to 3. Manager Jack Ryan of New Bedford had a good day all around as he was presented a loving cup by the Mahon Council, K. of C., while the Pere Marquette, K. of C. gave him a watch. The game was settled in the first inning when New Bedford scored five runs on three singles and two home runs. Circuit clouts by Stowers and McHugh of the losers, the latter making his second homer in two days, accounted for the Lynn runs.

Up to this game Lynn had won 33 straight.

Manchester ... winning from Lewiston in a 12-inning game, 4 to 2, gained a full game on Lynn.

Four games are played today, Manchester at Lewiston topping the bill. Lynn goes to Nashua, New Bedford entertains Brockton and Haverhill plays at Portland.

Taunton visits C. J. Lee playground for a tilt with South Boston and Roslindale is entertained at Reading in tonight's bill of Twilight League games.

Al Weygrand has assembled a pretty fair ball club at Taunton and with a few pitchers to add to his hurling corps, notable for the presence of Charlie Murphy, the Taunton pilot will be able to steer his outfit into victory waters.

Shoals are in the offing for Taunton tonight, however.

South Boston and Salem battled to a 9 to 9 tie in their tussle at South Boston and only darkness prevented both teams from finishing nine innings. As usual, Goode, Conway and Merritt starred at bat and in the field.

Smith is likely to get the pitching assignment tonight, and Taunton batsmen will find his offerings hard to hit.

Basque Battler Is 8 to 5 Favorite to Beat Schmeling

Yankee Stadium tonight. The bettors are of the opinion that Paulino's superior ring experience will enable him to gain the victory over the youthful German heavyweight.

It was Herr Max's right which enabled him to knock out Johnny Risko and Joe Monte and become a heavyweight sensation. Meanwhile, Paulino has been thumping out the opposition with his left hooks to the body.

More than 50,000 persons are expected to pay $500,000 to see Paulino and Schmeling punch it out tonight. The profits of the show will go to the milk fund of which Mrs. William Randolph Hearst is the head.

Schmeling and Paulino will each receive 20 per cent of the net receipts. This will mean that the rival boxers will each pull down $100,000 in the event of a gate of $500,000, the profits of the show will be close to $200,000. This money will furnish free milk for the poor children of New York during the summer.

THERE is intense interest in the meeting between Paulino and Schmeling, as the winner will meet Jack Sharkey in September in a bout which will be advertised a for the heavyweight championship of the world.

Sharkey is here for the bout and predicts there will be a knockout. He rates the German Dempsey and the Basque as the two hardest hitting heavyweights in the World.

Notables from all parts of the world will be in the great crowd which will gather around the ring to see the action.

Europe is greatly interested in the outcome of the battle. There are sports writers here from Germany and Spain, and they will cable blow by blow stories home.

One Madrid newspaper has made arrangements to have a telephone connection made with Madrid at the time the main bouts begin to enter the ring. It wants the detailed story of the battle.

The rival heavyweights each declare they are in the best possible condition and prepared to set a furious pace from the gong.

SCHMELING makes no secret of the fact that he will try for a quick knockout. He is filled with confidence and feel that his famous right hand sock will enable him to wreck the hopes of the Basque.

The Schmeling backers point to the fact that Kayo Christner and Otto Von Porat jarred Paulino in the closing rounds of their battles at the New York Garden during the indoor season. They contend that the Basque, who has the reputation of having a jaw of granite, has begun to go down grade. They argue that if Von Porat and Christner could shake Paulino up that Herr Max should crash through with a knockout.

Schmeling is one of the best knockout punchers in the heavyweight group. He does his heavy execution with the right hand, which he delivers overhand or underhand equally well. He is also able to jab and hook fairly well with his left.

JOHNNY RISKO was considered knockout proof up to the time he was nailed on the chin by Schmeling's right. Risko admits he did not remember a thing from the time he was nailed by Schmeling until he came to in his dressing room.

Schmeling, in looks and boxing style, resembles Jack Dempsey of 10 years ago. He is a bobbing, weaving fighter and can hit from any angle. He also keeps crowding the opposition.

Paulino isn't worrying a great deal about Schmeling's punch. He has been in there with Godfrey Wills, Heeney, Risko and other great fighters and has never been knocked off his feet, let alone knocked out.

The Basque has an advantage in the fact the bout is for 15 instead of 10 rounds. He is tireless in the ring and gets better the longer a contest progresses.

Paulino would have made a perfect 45-round fighter. He can absorb a great deal of punishment and still keep going forward.

The Basque is difficult to hit, as he keeps his head low and then guards his jaw by holding his hands high. One has to punch through Paulino's elbows in order to get a shot at his chin.

TILDEN AND MOLLA ARE WINNERS

Wimbledon, Eng., June 27 (INS)—America suffered another setback in the Wimbledon tennis championships here today, when Elizabeth Ryan was eliminated by Senorita Lili de Alvarez, the flashing Spanish star, 6—1, 8—6, in the women's singles.

Miss Ryan and the senorita fought a stubborn battle, the latter's play being featured by dazzling half-volleys, against which the American's chop strokes were unavailing.

Wimbledon, Eng., June 27 (AP)—Bill Tilden and Miss Molla Mallory, veterans of the American invaders seeking one British championship apiece, today kept their opening match victories intact. Tilden defeated Jack Kinsey of Germany and Miss Elizabeth Ryan, Chicago, 6—2, 6—2.

The British success came as Wimbledon received a triple setback when Kitty Aitken of Toronto was defeated by Miss Eva Mitchell, formerly Peggy Saunders, 6—4, 6—4, in the women's singles.

Miss Mary Sutton of Bronx and Miss Marjorie Mountt of the United States defeated Miss Eileen Bennett, Miss Lewis of England, 6—4, 6—2.

Wilbur Coen, still among the American Hopes, was beaten by Leonard Patterson of Australia, 6—3, 6—2.

REVERE BOUTS TO BE SPEEDED

Nine four-round bouts, an eight-round final and the returns of the Schmeling-Uzcudun fuss in New York, make up the program Matchmaker Lou Penney has arranged for the Cycle A. C. show tonight at the Revere Cycle track. No club has ever offered a better fighting card, and with the pleas of action promised by boys who relish fighting there should be enough action to satisfy all.

The show will open with heavyweights Mike Rafeale of Sharon Gardens and Leatherneck McLaughlin of Newport. No delays will be tolerated, and every bout will be in rapid succession, with the main go between Caspar of Boston and Joe Acerella of Providence figuring in an eight-rounder.

East-West Girls' Court Final Likely

By JOHN GILLOOLY

MARJORIE GLADMAN of the University of Southern California and Marjorie Sachs of Radcliffe are likely to meet in an East West tennis match tomorrow afternoon when the [illegible] national [illegible] singles are played at the Longwood Cricket Club courts.

Miss Gladman tackles Miss Dorrance Chase of Seymour, a fine [illegible] and Miss Sachs [illegible] Louise Sloane, a fellow Radcliffe player. Hope Little went [illegible] the old-timers [illegible] her work for Miss Gladman [illegible] Miss Sachs will be the finals.

Miss Chase, who has been a brilliant tennis, may give the star from the Golden West a battle, but it seems a foregone conclusion that Miss Gladman will be returned victorious.

Miss Sachs was extended to win from Miss Agnes Jaynes in her quarter-final round. Miss Jaynes took the second set 6—3 after Miss Sachs had won the first 6—0. The third set was hard fought but Miss Sachs won 6—4 and the match. The Radcliffe lass a good deal of the Radcliffe star and it may well today when the faces Louise Sloane.

THREE new tennis stars have come to the front in the week's [illegible] at Longwood Cricket Club. Little Lucy Fowle, who's [illegible] 12 years old, tennis out of the way to defeat Catherine Bonner, a seeded player in the [illegible] singles. Another pair who have been scintillating are the Foulon sisters from Malden Hills and Helen Hilda played her fourth round game in the [illegible] girls' [illegible] and defeated Katherine Wainwright, 6—3, 6—1.

A fast double match looms in the college class when Miss Sachs and Miss Chase semi-finalists in the singles meet Miss Gladman and her partner, Miss Josephine Cruickshank of the University of California. The winner of the match should be victorious in the final, which is also scheduled for Friday.

Luce May Meet Beals at Longwood Saturday

The Massachusetts state singles tennis final between Frank Luce of Yale and Malcolm Beals, which was scheduled for last Saturday, may be played at Longwood on Saturday.

Luce had to be rescued to the Peter Bent Brigham hospital, because the match was to be played. He was hemorrhaging so [illegible] and it was decided to postpone an operation for appendicitis until next Monday.

Luce's doctor gave him permission to play his final on Saturday. Now it remains to be seen if Beals can [illegible] Luce [illegible] Saturday. The winner of the match to Beals if he cannot play on Saturday for Luce would [illegible] of Malcolm [illegible] to [illegible]

A COAT of tan possesses more virtue than merely looking well. Sunlight acting on the skin produces chemical changes which are most beneficial. Special lamps are available nowadays if one cannot manage the open air method. One should not get too sunburnt at first.

RELIEF FOR MUSCULAR RHEUMATISM -:- By Dr. Bisch

Pain Worst Part of Attack, Says Famous Authority

THE term Muscular Rheumatism embraces several conditions which are characterized by pain in the muscle or group of muscles.

A stiff neck is a kind of muscular rheumatism. So is lumbago. As well as so-called "pleurodynia" or an affection of the muscles between the ribs.

It is really questionable whether the inflammation is muscular rheumatism, is in the muscle itself or whether the sensory nerve, or nerve of feeling and sensation, which runs to the muscle, is involved.

At any rate such rheumatic-like pains are fairly common and they may be so severe as to confine a patient to bed for days on end.

Exposure to cold may start an attack.

Men are more prone to the disease than women.

Often, after a strenuous tennis match or game of golf, when the individual is perspiring freely, and then exposes himself to a draught, pain will suddenly develop—and in severe form.

Chilling of any kind, such as sitting by an open window, exposing the arm or back during sleep, may cause the condition.

The pain is the worst part. It may be dull and aching; it may be very severely knife-like; it may be like a cramp.

A characteristic feature about pain is that it grows less when pressure is exerted upon the painful part, although this is not a constant feature.

In lumbago the pain is in the muscles of the loins. It usually appears quite suddenly. When severe that the patient must go to bed it often occurs that he is unable to move without excruciating pain.

In muscular rheumatism of the stiff neck variety the head is held awkwardly and rigidly. Instead of turning the head, the patient turns the whole body. This is done to spare himself pain, which also may be very severe and may even affect the muscles of the back.

The pain is, generally speaking, the most torturing in cases where the muscles of the ribs are involved.

Here the sufferer is afraid to breathe deeply. Strange to say, pressure aggravates the pain.

When a cough happens to complicate the condition the suffering may be real agony.

Persons with this affection often think they have pleurisy. Muscular rheumatism may be found in other muscles of the body besides those mentioned. It may occur in the extremities and in the abdominal muscles.

For pleurodynia, strapping of the chest, so as to lessen the excursion of the ribs in breathing, is often beneficial.

In any case of muscular rheumatism the part should be left at rest. Probably more porous plasters are used for various forms of muscular rheumatism than for anything else.

Sometimes certain forms of electricity brings relief. A certain remedy may help in one case and not in another.

Those who have had one attack of the malady, no matter what its location, are likely to have another of the same kind.

Such persons, therefore, should avoid exposure and wear warm, protecting clothing. Cold, damp places seem to predispose to repeated attacks.

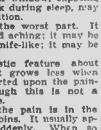
NEW LIVER DISHES

"PLEASE bring forth a new meat animal" is the plea of many a homemaker who has three meals to plan each of the 365 days of the year.

So far, no one has been able to bring about the miracle, but the cry for new ideas and further knowledge of foods is being answered for every homemaker. This information is brought to you regularly in pages of this and the newspaper.



Martha Lee

Not so long ago you read that some of our least expensive meat foods offered nutritional values of which we never dreamed. One of these meats is the lowly liver, consumed with relish by the house's pets, but never served to the members of the family. It is archived on their tasty diet, while John and Mary, the family "hen" and "heiress," remained pale, thin and in many cases anemic and lacking in appetite.

Then one of America's greatest research nutritionists discovered that this same lowly liver was brimful of health and life-giving minerals and vitamins, and that it and the other meat organs heretofore scorned by the family were just the foods needed to insure healthy, happy, well-nourished boys and girls, men and women.

1¼ lbs. liver in 1 piece.
4 tbsps. bacon drippings.
¼ c. flour.
1 small onion.
2 carrots.
2½ c. tomatoes.
1 c. celery.
3 c. potatoes.
1½ tsps. salt.
⅛ tsp. pepper.
1 small bay leaf.
½ c. salt pork.

Melt drippings in hot frying pan. Dredge liver with flour, place in frying pan and sear to a golden brown on all sides, then put in casserole. Add thinly sliced onion and carrots, chopped celery, diced potatoes and seasoning. Pour tomatoes over all and sprinkle with finely chopped salt pork. Cover and bake in a moderate (350° F.) oven for 2½ hours. Serves seven.

LIVER A LA CREOLE

1 lb. liver.
1 thick slice bacon chopped.
2 tbsps. chopped suet.
4 tbsps. flour.
½ tsp. pepper.
2 o. canned tomatoes.
1 tsp. salt.
½ tsp. sugar.
⅛ tsp. curry powder.
4 onions.

Wipe with damp cloth, skin and remove veins from liver. Cut in ¼-inch slices. Dredge with flour. Fry bacon and suet in deep saucepan, add the liver, chopped onions, pepper and turn until the meat is thoroughly seared and coated with a rich brown gravy. Add tomatoes and seasonings, cover closely and simmer ½ hour. Serve over hot thin narrow strips of buttered toast. Serves four.

LIVER-STUFFED GREEN PEPPERS

8 green peppers.
1½ lbs. liver, parboiled.
1 tomato.
1 c. boiled rice.
3 tbsps. grated onion.
1 tsp. salt.
1½ c. parboiling water.

Select peppers that will stand level. Remove a piece around the stem with the seeds. Pour boiling water over the peppers and let stand ½ hour. Cut the liver and tomato in small pieces; mix with the other ingredients except water. Stuff peppers, set in a casserole or baking dish. Pour in the water and bake ½ hour in a moderate oven (375° F.). Place on individual plates, pour over Hollandaise sauce and serve at once. Serves six portions.

The following articles, which appeared in Science—Supplement, p. xii, Vol. LXIX, No. 1792, May 3, 1929 is of interest.

"Liver, which is now being used extensively as a cure for anemia, may be soon a substitute for insulin in the treatment of diabetes, it appears from studies made at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston by Dr. Harry Blotner and Dr. William P. Murphy. Dr. Murphy, with Dr. G. R. Minot, developed the liver treatment for pernicious anemia. In the study just reported, Drs. Blotner and Murphy found that liver contains a substance that will reduce the blood sugar concentration of the blood as insulin does.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

The Question Mark -:- -:-

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

"What a strange thing is MAN—and what a stranger is WOMAN!"

BYRON said that:—that beautiful, crippled young man who, if he had known that song, would have sung, "Plant me among the Girls!"

He had the wit to say not only what every other man says, "How strange is woman," but to say as well, and say it first—"How strange is man!"

It seems he knew that though women can "see through a man" easier than he can through her, still he, too, human that he is, is not clear—but opaque! Woman can see only part way; and then she spreads both hands and says, "Isn't that just like a man? Why, will you tell me, WHY did he do that!" Almost duplicate words for those a man chants at certain moments in his life with the women of his world.

In another day, that some of us gentle souls rather sigh for, the days of less noise, of stage coaches, and fluffy women, gentlemen stood beside the piano and sang that pretty question-song of two geniuses, Shakespeare and Shubert, "Who Is Sylvia?—What Is She?" Men still sing it; but in a less graceful way. They ask the world WHO the girl they've even called "wife" for five years is, and WHAT is she! One man says, "she is a woman," and he has said it all! Bitter! One says that a man "without a home and a woman in it is a drifting planet without a sun." One says "she is uncertain and light-minded in prosperity, but let the clouds gather over his head, and then she turns fighting angel." Nice man! One says, "a wise man will never trust the wind or—woman." Another says the only secret that he ever told that was not passed on, "was told to a girl." One man says, "I can't understand 'em—but I like 'em!" Another nice man—and honest! He stands out the true American man, that most of us know. He can't understand them sometimes, but he likes them most of the time.

So the American girl thinks, too, of the man she works with, loves, smiles at, gets mad at, and still loves. "WHO is my John? —WHAT is he!" she sings wistfully. She can't understand him sometimes, but likes him most of the time.

Says Giorietta, "I would sooner trust a crocodile!" "Man is a child," says another. "How wonderful is man," says gentle Jane. "A puzzle and a baby," says sophisticate Suzanne. "Often better than his actions," says a wise one. "Says one thing, and means another," whispers Brownette. "There are real men," announces Blonde, "strong and true, honest and able, gentle and brave!"

When you say, Woman is an eternal question mark to a man; be honest, and add, and so, in some measure, is man to woman!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

RESCUE BID DECLINED

Auction Bidding: South bids one No Trump and North properly refrains from "rescuing" with his weak five-card Minor.

Contract Bidding: South makes a forcing bid of two Diamonds. West passing, North responds to the forcing bid by a bid of three Clubs, whereupon South ventures the game bid of three No Trumps.

The Play: West, opening the 4 of Hearts, Declarer wins in his own hand to preserve Dummy's King as the only entry for Dummy's Club suit. Declarer establishes Clubs by leading the Ace, followed by a low Club. East, winning the second Club trick, leads a Heart, upon which West plays the 8, thus denying the 6 and marking his original lead as from a four-card suit. Dummy, winning with the King of Hearts, runs off his three Clubs, West showing out and discarding two Spades (high-low) and a Diamond. East discards two Diamonds. West, having shown by his play an original holding of but four Hearts and two Clubs, is marked with a 4-3 split of the other two suits. Otherwise he must have held a five-card suit and would probably have opened it. West's discards clearly indicate an entry in Spades, probably the Ace now alone, while East's Diamond discards indicate that West also holds the Queen of Diamonds guarded. Dummy next leads a Diamond. Declarer does not finesse but wins with the King and puts West in with a Heart, prepared to allow West to win his two Heart tricks and the Ace of Spades, on the assurance that West must then lead up to Declarer's Ace-Jack of Diamonds both of which must win, making game on the hand.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper enclosing self addressed stamped envelope.

SYMMETRICAL LEGS

By Maria Jeritza.

DESPITE the predictions of dress reformers, short skirts are seemingly here to stay—at least for daytime and sports.

The fact is, short skirts are extremely comfortable, especially for active women. And modern women are active and love comfort.

The vogue for short skirts, since it encourages building up a symmetrical body with shapely lower limbs, must be counted an asset to health as well as beauty. For the measures that bring about symmetry invariably improve the health at the same time. This is because healthy muscles tend to accumulate just the symmetrical amount of fatty tissue—neither too much nor too little.

You cannot change the bone formation of your ankles and legs—at least, not if you are over fifteen or sixteen. After that age the bones are set so firmly that a surgical operation is necessary in order to overcome knock-knees, bowlegs and similar defects. But correct posture and healthy muscles with the right amount of overlaid fatty tissue will do much to improve the appearance even of legs not formed according to rules of symmetry. For that reason, I advise women who wish to improve the shape and appearance of their lower limbs to go into a gymnasium and work under a skilled director, practicing exercises designed to improve the carriage of the body and especially of the legs and feet.

Exercises such as the following should keep your legs supple, limber, hence graceful if practiced persistently each day. It is claimed by some authorities that short training twice a week will enable girls to attain physical perfection, but daily practice is wiser in most cases—practice to which you give undivided attention and interest.

Lie flat on your stomach on the floor. Lift your left leg and your right arm until they meet and you grasp your left toes over your right toes with your left arm over your left shoulder.

Repeat this exercise five times or more, but without straining. You will find that it gives a refreshing stretch to the muscles of your upper thighs and also to your abdomen and lower back.

You might try also to grasp your left toes with your left fingers over your right shoulder and alternate by grasping your right toes with your right hand over your left shoulder. You will not be able to do this stunt unless you are an expert acrobat, but the effort is good exercise and refreshing.

Sensible diet has much to do with the shapeliness of the legs as well as of the entire body. Eat enough, but eat slowly and see that each day you include milk, fruit, fresh vegetables and either lean meat or fish or eggs in your menus.

Oil of massage may fatten scrawny legs, but it is the massage rather than the oil that does the work, since oil applied externally does not feed tissue, but massage stimulates circulation of blood which is tissue food.

Modern fashions are designed for slender, graceful athletic figures with fine straight arms and legs.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going out with a young man, but he dropped me for another girl. The young man that was going with this girl started going with me. Now we have quit, and they have quit.

My former friend wishes to go with me again. I like him, and I know he likes me. He went with this other girl just for spite.

RED BIRD.

SINCE you like your friend, dear Red Bird, and he likes you, and there seems no good reason why you and he should not "go together," by all means renew this old comradeship and enjoy each other's friendship.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl. My parents refuse to let me stay out late nights. I love a foreigner who is better educated than I am. My parents will not allow him to come to our house to see me because he is not of my nationality and religion. I have not told him this for fear he may feel insulted.

Will you please advise me regarding my case? I thank you.

FAITHFUL READER.

YOU do not mention your age in your letter, my dear, and your age has an important bearing on your problem. If, as I assume from your letter, you are not yet twenty-one, by all means follow your parents advice in the matter of your friendship for the young foreigner. Tell him the truth quite simply—that your parents do not wish to have you invite him to your home or go about with him. You need not mention reasons. Give yourself a chance, while you are still young, to grow fond of young men who are suitable for you as friends and possible sweethearts.

CHAPTER 4

GRANT DALTON'S face went a patchy purple.

"Take it, damn you!" he snarled as he dropped the notes on the desk.

Dench withdrew the gun, but still held it in his right hand while with the left he turned the notes over and divided them into two equal packages.

"Fifty-fifty, my dear Halstead," he said as he pocketed one bundle and handed the other to grant. "And just you remember dog don't eat dog. I've every right to take the lot, but you'll need a hundred for exes. Now get on with your job. You're going to London, aren't you?"

Dench looked him up and down with a cool smile which made Grant writhe.

"Don't try and double-cross me," the butler advised. "I wonder which of us will make the most out of Mrs. Nesbit," he added as he left the room.

He went straight upstairs to Joyce's boudoir.

Joyce's face, when Dench laid the notes on her desk, was a picture of amazement.

"I'd rather you kept these, ma'am," he said.

"But isn't he blackmailing you?" asked Joyce slyly.

Dench's eyes narrowed. "In a sense, yes, and to that extent I'm a fool. Yet, if I had taken the lot off him and thrown him out he'd have had me back in the cells in an hour. That's why, I divided with him."

As Dench reached the foot of the stairs, he heard a car moving off. Philip driving his Ford, Joyce disappeared as Dench stood at the front door.

"So the Daltons have gone," he said eagerly.

"No such luck," replied Dench. "Grant's gone to London for a couple of days—that's all."

"We'll be grateful even for small mercies," said Jeff with a smile.

"Yes, it gives us time to get our breath, so to speak," said Dench. "See here, Sir, have you sent that cable yet?"

"No. I am going to Plymouth to do it locally."

"You're right," said Dench briefly. "When you're sending it will you send a telegram for me?" Without waiting for a reply he took a sheet of paper and a pencil from his writing-table, quickly wrote a few lines which he handed to Jeff. The address was Mike Logan, 5 Jessopp's Rents, London, S E., and it was written in a cypher which Jeff could not understand.

Joyce came forward. "What's this about a cable?"

"Dench has told me of a man who, he declares, can find out whether Nesbit is alive or not."

Joyce shook her head. "I'm afraid it's no good, Jeff. Grant Dalton showed me a letter this morning from a man named Alston who lives at Rocky Point and says that Charlie has been seen again at a place called Last Chance. He calls himself Charles Holt And—and he seems to have lost his memory."

"I don't believe a word of it," declared Jeff stoutly.

He refused to be discouraged. "I'm going to send this cablegram at once. I'm on my way to Plymouth now."

On the way Joyce remembered to her dismay that she had asked Major Merivale, head of the prison to luncheon on the morrow.

"But Dench — what about Dench!"

"Dench, of course, will not appear."

"You will come to lunch and back me up, won't you?" she asked.

"Of course I'll come. It will be lots of fun."

The next morning when Dench appeared he looked different. "What have you been doing to yourself?" asked Joyce.

"A very little maiden. Just a slight change in the way I have done my hair, and a couple of inkle-rubber pads inside my cheeks. I made 'em out of the erasers on your writing-desk. I hope you don't think it a liberty."

"It's extraordinary. I should hardly have known you."

"I'm glad of that, ma'am," said Dench serenely.

"Why? I don't understand."

"Because, if you don't know me, it's likely the Governor won't either."

"Have you gone crazy, Dench? Surely you know it would be fatal if Major Merivale set eyes on you."

"Pardon me, ma'am. I don't know anything of the sort. There's about six hundred of us up at Princetown. Major Merivale has spoken to me once—that was just after I came in. That man has got to see me sooner or later. I prefer to choose the time and the place, myself—rather than leave it to chance. I've a good reason."

Dench threw open the dining room door. "Luncheon is served, madam," he said in a deep, resonant voice.

Joyce cast a scared look at Major Merivale but she need not have worried for the Governor never looked at the butler.

Jeff, mindful of her advice, began to talk of America.

"Much to be said in that country, agreed the Major. "And it breeds some wonderful crooks. That's where this fellow Dench came from." He turned to Joyce "I'd give a lot to catch that man, Mrs. Nesbit. He and Charles Holt—it's the first time for many years that a prisoner has been loose for three days, and the Home Office are making a fearful fuss about it. It isn't doing me any good, I can tell you."

"They seem to think he may have shed London," put in Jeff

"That is very unlikely. The Scotland Yard was warned at once, and every station has been watched."

"But could he be hiding out on the Moor?" said Jeff.

"No, that is even less likely, for in that case we should have heard of his breaking into some house and stealing food." He lowered his voice. "My opinion is that someone is sheltering him."

Joyce felt her fingers tremble on the stem of the wine-glass she held. Jeff was sitting tight. Dench remained undisturbed.

"A little more hock, Sir," he said gently as the Governor waiting for an answer refilled the Governor's glass.

"This is wonderful wine, Mrs. Nesbit," said Major Merivale as he sipped it appreciatively.

"A glass of port, Sir," said Dench blandly at that moment in the Governor's ear, and without waiting for a reply carefully filled a glass from the cobwebbed bottle. The Governor sipped. "A wonderful wine," he declared. "A wonderful wine in perfect condition." He lifted the glass towards his hostess. "Your very good health, Mrs. Nesbit, and may you never have any more adventure than that of the foggy night."

"That butler of yours is a treasure, Jeff," the Major, "if you ever wish to part with him let me know."

"Certainly, I will let you know, Major, but I rather fancy Jenkins prefers service at Deeping to that of Scotland Yard."

Jeff saw him off and came back. He closed the drawing-room door behind him. "Dench, Joyce, thank the Powers that's over!" he said, drawing a long breath. "We were skating on pretty thin ice there."

Joyce with a hug. "But Dench was right, Bluff has paid, and now I think we can consider ourselves fairly safe."

Joyce was busy snipping dead blooms from the standard roses below the terrace walk when Dench approached. "I have a telegram for you, ma'am," he said.

"A telegram," repeated Joyce eagerly. "A cable?"

"Yes, ma'am, but it might be wiser not to take it here. Someone might be watching from the windows."

Dench went in and Joyce followed. "I wouldn't expect too much ma'am," he said as he handed her the buff envelope. "Most likely it's only an acknowledgement of your message."

Joyce tore it open and in spite of Dench's warning a look of disappointment crossed her face. "You are right as usual," she said with a sigh. "Sladen acknowledges our cable and says that he will start enquiries at once. But there's one interesting bit of news, for he adds that he has not heard anything of Charles Holt."

The following afternoon while Jeff and she were chatting on the verandah a woman came up the drive.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" Jeff asked courteously going to the door.

The woman looked up at him in half-frightened way. "I have come to see Mrs. Nesbit," she answered in a low but rather pleasant voice. Jeff noticed one unmistakable thing about her: she was American. "Is she at home?"

"Yes," said Jeff. "And if you will tell me your name and business I will find out if she can see you?"

She followed him in and he stood aside while she leaned over a table and wrote her name on the back of the card. Then she folded the card in two and gave it to him.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

JOYCE NESBIT, an attractive young widow living near Dartmoor prison, meets Jeff Ballard, an American. Joyce has bought Deeping Royal, his old home. Two distant relatives by marriage, Grant and Philip Dalton, father and son, are taking care of her fortune. Jeff sizes up the men as crooks. Joyce orders them to get out. Jeff tells her if she were poor he would marry her; she persuades him to become engaged to her as a means of protection. In a file of convicts passing Joyce recognizes a man named Dench. One of two escaped convicts holds up her car.

She is rescued by another escaped convict who proves to be Dench, once her dead husband's valet. She passes him off as her butler. The Daltons recognize him, but he amazes them by recognizing them, too, as crooks, and threatens to send them to jail if they give him away. They are after Joyce's money and take him into partnership, the elder Dalton telling his son that if Dench gets troublesome there's one sure way to stop him. Dalton tells Joyce he has evidence her husband is not dead. He gets £200 for expenses. She gives it to him. Dench holds him up and takes half.

When Joyce saw the name she uttered a low cry.

"What is it?" he asked as he sprang towards her.

For answer she held out the card. Jeff stared at it. "Mrs. Charles Holt" he read. At first he was puzzled, then like a flash came the memory of what Dalton had told Joyce, and of the query he himself had added to the cable.

Jeff went straight out into the hall. "Mrs. Nisbet will see you," he said. "Come this way."

Joyce, who had been standing near the window, came forward; her face was still very white, but otherwise she showed no sign of emotion. "You are Mrs. Charles Holt?" she asked.

"I cannot speak before a third person," she declared.

"I don't want to be unkind," Joyce replied "but Mr Ballard is my dearest friend, and I have no secrets from him."

"Very well," said Mrs. Holt at last. "It is for you as you wish, Mrs. Nisbet. But it isn't easy to say what I have to say even to you and—"

Jeff saw Joyce's face pulver slightly and knew she was frightened. He was about to speak breathlessly for what Mrs. Holt would say. But she seemed tongue-tied.

Joyce spoke. "You have come from the States?" she asked. "Perhaps you have some news of my husband?" and Jeff marvelled at her courage.

"Your husband?" repeated the other woman "That—that is it. I—I don't know whether he is your husband or mine."

A rob broke from Mrs Holt. "I thought he was Holt. I never dreamed he was Nesbit," she said

"Are you sure of that now?" asked Joyce gently.

The other woman made a desperate and hurried but successful attempt to calm herself

"I'm afraid there's not a lot of doubt about it. I'll try and tell you. Two years ago mother and I, were running a boarding house at a little place called Daley. It's a mining town on the Snake River, and all our boarders worked in the Daley Smelting works.

"I met Mr. Holt when he was down and out. We took care of him and he got well. He's a good sort and I knew I could trust him not to talk, and he went to work and found all he could. And then when he told me what he had found I hadn't any doubt any longer."

A sob escaped her, but she dried her eyes and went on resolutely. "The doctor said the best thing I could do was to keep quiet. We had some savings—enough to pay my fare and baby's. I couldn't leave her, you see. And—and I found out where you lived and came right here" She broke down completely and wept piteously

Joyce leaned over and laid her hand on Mrs. Holt's shoulder. "You poor thing," she said again. Then she turned to Jeff. "Go into the dining room and get some wine and biscuits. She is worn out, and must have some food before we talk any more."

Jeff nodded and went. He was hardly surprised to find Dench in the hall. He signed to him to come into the dining room and told him what he wanted. "You've been listening?" he said curtly as Dench got the biscuits from the sideboard.

Dench showed no sign of shame. "Yes, he answered. "I've heard pretty near all."

"It's a bad business," said Jeff grimly.

"Bad enough," allowed Dench as he put a decanter on the tray. "But has she got any proofs, Sir?"

"I'll find out," replied Jeff as he took the tray and went back.

Mrs Holt had stopped crying. She wiped her eyes and drank a glass of sherry which put some color back into her pale cheeks. Then Jeff spoke. "Mrs. Holt, I want to ask you a question or two."

"Anything you like, Sir," was the frank answer. "I'm here to tell you all I know."

"You say you are sure that your husband who calls himself Charles Holt, is really Charles Nesbit, and from what you have already said there does not seem much doubt. What we should like to know is whether you have any definite proof that the two men are one and the same."

Mrs. Holt opened her handbag and took out a purse from which she extracted an envelope. The envelope contained a photograph which she handed to Joyce. One look at it brought Joyce cry. "It's Charlie," she said in a choked voice and handed the picture to Jeff.

"You are sure, Joyce?" asked Jeff.

"I can't be mistaken," said Joyce. "The only difference is that scar on his left cheek. Otherwise it is Charlie. It's Charlie—and no one else."

From FORBIDDEN LOVE

gin to pay soon and the girls would be getting married.

The Whaley girl next door furnished her with more tangible worry. She was getting invitations the Hollebeck girls were not. And who were the Whaleys? Nobody at all. Mama had snubbed Bertha Smith for the shopkeeper's daughter she was when they were girls, and turned up her aristocratic nose at the plodding Raymond Whaley, who wasn't even in society at all. And now Bertha Smith was Mrs. Raymond Whaley, living in the big house next door, with a daughter mentioned in the society columns nearly every day. It was too much. Mama was worried, and when she worried, she nagged:

"Is she?"

"Yes, she is. It says here in the Examiner, 'Miss Isabelle Whaley, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Arthur Whaley of Fredmont, will be one of the charming young girls who will—'"

"Oh, mama! It isn't that!"

"How do you know it isn't, my dear? And it isn't as though you were alone. You've actions' pelted on Nancy. It hardly seems fair for your younger sister to have to suffer because you—"

"But, mama, I HAVEN'T been rude to Mrs. Nutting. Good lord, she doesn't know I'm alive!"

"LOUISE! You mustn't talk like that to your mother. Why doesn't she want to know you? I'm sure my people are as good as hers. When I was a young girl no smart gathering would have been COMPLETE without me. It's true that your father's people are not . . . distinguished, but . . . nobody knows them around here.

"It isn't like having a grandfather who kept a grocery store like poor Isabelle's. Who would think, to see Bertha Whaley in her monk coat now, that she wore dirty red pinafores—dirty, mind you, made out of an old tablecloth or something when she was first married. I'm not one to with anyone harm, but I often think, if people ever saw Whaley with his dirty face, working for my father, around the stable in Fruitvale . . ."

Clickety, clack. Clickety, clack Once mama's tongue got started on that subject there was no stopping it. Aunt Ellie, hands folded on her stomach, rocked and nodded.

Louise sewed in frozen silence. She would have given anything in the world to get away from it all. To get out and make a place for herself in the working world. The world where nobody cared how pretty you were or how much money you had, whether you made your work efficiently and well. But how can you get out and carve a career for yourself when your mother's health is failing and you're needed at home?

In that mood she almost sympathized with Nancy. Love didn't last. Look at all the romances that ended in the divorce court. Jack Beamer had more money than he could spend, and he had a place in society as well.

Head waiters scrambled when he approached People liked him. His ranch in the fertile valley of the San Joaquin was one of the show places of the state. His yacht, the Swallow, won every regatta up and down the coast. His horses were international favorites. Sunday supplements from East to West knew him as a polo player.

It was even easy to overlook his marriage. It was notoriously a joke. They didn't even go to formal parties together any more. For years people had asked, "When are the Beamers going to Reno?"

Why shouldn't Nancy marry him if she wanted to?

But just when Louise would get that far in her thoughts and begin to picture Nancy secure, petted, pampered, the second Mrs. Beamer, another picture would form over the first one, blotting it out . . . Jack Beamer holding Nancy in his strong, thick arms, his broad back bent to lift her closer . . . Nancy, calm and remote and strangely exotic as she had looked that night in the pale starlight when she and Jack had come upon them near the river. So she always ended by wanting to cry . . . no use pretending . . . it hurt, and nothing would not even Jack Beamer's money, could make it right.

Nancy was beautiful, either. She wandered around with two bright red spots in her cheeks, listening for the telephone, watching for the postman, quarrelsome and restless as a caged cat.

"For Jesus sake, if we're going, why don't we go? What is Aunt Ellie waiting for? If I'd known we were going to wait around a week I'd have gone right back to the river. It'll be just like her not to go after all!"

But, slowly and surely, Aunt Ellie got ready to leave. Two of the best rooms at the Anahnee were reserved. Tickets were bought. A full roll of greenbacks withdrawn from the bank.

Her favorite prescriptions were filled: her traveling medicine case equipped with variegated pills. A bottle of pre-war whiskey against snake bite. A large supply of mineral water to go on ahead. A last farewell to poor Uncle Joseph, round-faced and jolly despite all his sufferings, as he lay on his narrow white bed at St. Francis' Hospital. A last polonaise down the hall with the fresh looking nurse who was "specialing" him, and Aunt Ellie and the girls were on their way.

Mama waved a fondly tearful hand-bye from the doorways the taxi started. Aunt Ellie pointed a fat finger at the meter. "It was 25 cents before we went a quarter of a block — Five cents for this. Three goes his tip!"

They came into the valley at midnight. It lay under the golden eye of the sun, in extravagant, unreal beauty.

But Aunt Ellie Watson was not interested in scenery. She had come to the Yosemite to rest and she made it very plain that she had brought the girls to rock with her.

Resentful but resigned, Lou sat beside her and said "Yes, Aunt Ellie," and "No, I don't think so, Aunt Ellie," while the old lady droned, "I didn't think much of the fish for lunch. At the prices they charge one would expect . . . I declare, if there's one mosquito" . . . I declare, if there's one around here for miles, it makes for me. I wonder what your Uncle Joseph is up to? You needn't expect to get anything when he passes away for to go on ahead. A last farewell to poor Uncle Joseph, round-faced and jolly despite all his sufferings, as he lay on his narrow white bed at St. Francis' Hospital A last polonaise down the hall with the fresh looking nurse who was "specialing" him, and Aunt Ellie and the girls were on their way.

Nancy sat mute beside them, her slim hands crossed in her lap, dark eyes moodily scanning the crowds. Aunt Ellie had engaged rooms in the lobby until 9 o'clock. Aunt Ellie put her everlasting crochet in its black satin bag and plodded towards the elevator. "We might as well go too," Louise said. "We don't know anyone."

She slipped her arm through Nancy's and got to her feet.

"Wait!" Nancy breathed She was leaning forward, staring fixedly at a man who had just come in.

His First Fee -:- A Short Story -:- By Lenore Kisselman Stern

JOHN HENRY MASON leaned back in the swivel chair of his seventy-odd law office and wondered when the rose-hued dreams of his law school days would come true.

He reflected upon the events which had transpired since his graduation and bitterly decided that the ancient and honored profession to which he had sworn allegiance was a dismal failure as a producer of food and drink. For six dreary months since he had first hung out his shingle, "John Henry Mason, Attorney-at-Law," his only callers had been creditors seeking payment of overdue typewriter, stationery and overdue installments on the office furniture.

Through the window fell rays of golden rays of the August sun and the cloudless blue of the sky was unblemished save by the lazy spirals which listlessly emerged from the tall chimneys of Ironsville's pride and joy, the Weldon foundries.

At a sound of footsteps in the hallway which presaged a possible client, John pulled his chair close to the desk and feigned industrious interest in the bills, statements and dunning letters, the only papers before him.

The door opened and the newcomer approached John with outstretched hand.

"Good morning," Mr. Mason.

"Good morning, sir, won't you have a seat? If you don't mind waiting, I would like to finish what I am doing here, a very important matter that I am taking care of for Mr. Weldon. I presume you are familiar with the name, he owns the foundries across the street."

"Quite satisfactory," said the stranger "Take your time. I am in no hurry."

"Now, sir, what can I do for you?" asked John, a few minutes later.

"Mr. Mason, if you will give me a few minutes of your time I have something here which will be of great importance to you," and the suave prospect began to open up his brief case. There was a proposition in which I am sure you will be interested. The National Publishing Company has a special inducement. With each three-year subscription to their magazine a handsomely bound set of Ormsby's works with full illustrations . . .

"Not interested," interrupted John with disappointment and despair. "I am, as you see, too busy to discuss this with you now. Some other time, perhaps." And he escorted the salesman to the door.

John slumped down in his seat and reached into his bag for the future in his chosen career held nothing for him and decided to close his office for good and all. He had just reached for his hat when a timid tap on the door announced another visitor.

"Come in," he called.

The opening of the door revealed to his sight a vision of loveliness that fairly took his breath away.

"Are you busy," she asked in a voice the music of which so thrilled him that his very finger tips tingled.

"Why, of course not. Won't you come in?" he begged.

When she sat down in the chair in front of his desk the light from the window showed him only too clearly the peaches and cream of her complexion and the shine of the sun turned her hair into strands of finely spun gold.

How like the sky the blue of her eyes John thought, and then to himself, "I suppose she is soliciting for some pet charity and what a worse I can't even donate anything, but to her he said in a cheerful voice, "Is there something I can do for you?"

"Yes," she replied. "I have a matter which requires the attention of a lawyer but unfortunately I am not in a position to pay a fee unless you are willing to trust me for it."

For the first time noticing the shabbiness of her attire which seemed so incongruous when compared with her remarkable beauty, he asked, "Let's hear your case."

"You see, I am the daughter of Robert Weldon who died a year ago and who was the brother of Edgar Weldon, owner of the foundries. My father worked for his brother for many years and did told me many times he had an interest in the business. When father died very suddenly, leaving us nothing, I went to my uncle and asked him about it but he denied that my father was entitled to anything from the business and refused to do anything for us.

"My mother is an invalid and times have been very bad, often the little bit which I have been able to earn has been scarcely enough to keep body and soul together.

"I have consulted many lawyers around town, most of whom told me that I had no grounds for which legal action could be had. Two or three thought I might have a fair chance but they refused to do anything for me unless I was able to give them a fee in advance. This, of course, I was unable to do. I thought that perhaps you might be willing to do something and make your fee contingent upon the success of my claim."

John wondered how the other attorneys were able to resist the charm of that smile and the hypnotic influence of those calm blue eyes. He was not able to and accepted his first client.

It was Edgar Weldon speaking and he shook his finger at John as they trudged to the top of the court house on the morning of the trial of the case of Weldon vs. Weldon.

"Let me tell you, young man," he shouted angrily, "you haven't a chance, and after I get through with you, you will wish you had never started to practice in this town."

John reflected on the quantity of his success and thought gayly of Weldon's prophecy was a little late, but made no comment, however. He went on into the court room accompanied by his fair client

It was on the second day of the trial that the elder lawyers and about the court room began to wonder if there was not something to the plaintiff's case, after all

When the plaintiff had finished her side of the case and the court refused a non-suit, John had Weldon on the stand for cross-examination. But by bit the truth came out.

The members of the jury erased their necks forward with renewed interest John's adroitness was a surprise even to himself. At the noon recess, Weldon's counsel began to angle for terms of settlement and that night a proposition was arrived at which was satisfactory to all concerned. A generous and kind as possible under the circumstances.

called her Helen now) they spelled food, and clothing, comforts yes, even a few of the luxuries of life.

On the day named for the final settlement Helen personally brought the check.

"See here, Mason," he said, "you've done a very successful piece of work. What is Aunt Ellie waiting for?" If I'd known we were going to wait around a week another picture would form over the first one, blotting it out . . . Jack Beamer holding Nancy in his strong, thick arms, his broad back bent to lift her closer . . . Nancy, calm and remote and strangely exotic as she had looked that night in the pale starlight when she and Jack had come upon them near the river. So she always ended by wanting to cry . . . no use pretending . . . it hurt, and nothing would not even Jack Beamer's money, could make it right.

Nancy was beautiful, either. She wandered around with two bright red spots in her cheeks, listening for the telephone, watching for the postman, quarrelsome and restless as a caged cat.

"For Jesus sake, if we're going, why don't we go? What is Aunt Ellie waiting for? If I'd known we were going to wait around a week I'd have gone right back to the river. It'll be just like her not to go after all!"

But, slowly and surely, Aunt Ellie got ready to leave. Two of the best rooms at the Anahnee were reserved. Tickets were bought. A full roll of greenbacks withdrawn from the bank.

Her favorite prescriptions were filled: her traveling medicine case equipped with variegated pills. A bottle of pre-war whiskey against snake bite. A large supply of mineral water to go on ahead. A last farewell to poor Uncle Joseph, round-faced and jolly despite all his sufferings, as he lay on his narrow white bed at St. Francis' Hospital A last polonaise down the hall with the fresh looking nurse who was "specialing" him, and Aunt Ellie and the girls were on their way.

Mama waved a fondly tearful hand-bye from the doorways the taxi started. Aunt Ellie pointed a fat finger at the meter. "It was 25 cents before we went a quarter of a block — Five cents for this. Three goes his tip!"

They came into the valley at midnight. It lay under the golden eye of the sun, in extravagant, unreal beauty.

But Aunt Ellie Watson was not interested in scenery. She had come to the Yosemite to rest and she made it very plain that she had brought the girls to rock with her.

Resentful but resigned, Lou sat beside her and said "Yes, Aunt Ellie," and "No, I don't think so, Aunt Ellie," while the old lady droned, "I didn't think much of the fish for lunch. At the prices they charge one would expect . . . I declare, if there's one mosquito" . . . I declare, if there's one around here for miles, it makes for me. I wonder what your Uncle Joseph is up to? You needn't expect to get anything when he passes away for Debate Proposed Between Owen D. Young and Swope

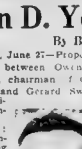
By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, June 27.—Proposed, a debate between Owen D. Young, lawyer, chairman of General Electric, and Gerard Swope, engineer, president of General Electric.

Subject: "Does an engineering training best fit a man to head a enterprise, or is specialization in generalization the best preparation for reaching the top?"

There is a reason for making this suggestion



B. C. Forbes

The General Electric Company was the only business concern in America to have two of its leading executives honored by receiving degrees from colleges this year. Their acceptance speeches, delivered almost simultaneously, differed sharply, according to the summaries published by the newspapers. The one executive was unaware of what the other was going to say—Mr. Young did not know what Mr. Swope was going to say until he got on his feet, as he had not had a moment to prepare an address

In acknowledging the degree of Doctor of Engineering from Stevens Institute of Technology (Hoboken), President Swope of General Electric, addressing the students, said in part:

"Great and fundamental changes have come into the conduct of business and industry in recent years. The units of organization have become larger, laws and public opinion more definitely crystallized, ethics of good business have been put on a more satisfactory basis and ownership has become more diversified. All these tend to make management more and more objective and professional and to put it before the public as not only for individual owners but also for employees and the public.

"Business and industrial organizations have become so large, that they can no longer be run by one man, or group of men by tradition. The requirements and problems of the public must be studied and analyzed, new methods proposed must be subjected to searching tests and results of development and exploitation must be fully mapped out.

Two days later Mr. Young chairman of General Electric, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Hamilton College, New York, and, said the newspaper specialization in generalization was advocated by Mr. Young for the graduating class. He added:

"It may be worth noting in lead of a school primarily in a foreign country to know something of history, arts and the languages, than to know about physics and chemistries.

There you have the issue joined. Hence the proposed debate.

Many thousands of youths are now in process of education. Which type of education would best fit them to become heads of our modern enterprises? Many organizations in addition to engineering more likely to lead them to the summits than a general course, a course embracing history, the arts and the languages, to quote Mr. Young?

The President of an important Western corporation, visiting his son at an Eastern college, this week, said to me:

"I have strongly advised him against taking an engineering course. I don't want him to become a purely technical man. I would like to see him develop the broader economic outlook on life and on problems of business. I am afraid that if he were to enter Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for example, he might become so engrossed in strictly engineering problems that he would shut out from his mind everything else, and that he would thus stand less chance of becoming the president of a big concern that if he were to take a regular college course.

"I know that we live in a age of specialization but it is not a specialist as a rule, who is developed to become the commander-in-chief of a great army of executives. What he can do for that kind of a position is a good all-around man.

My own observation is that the biggest positions of all are more frequently awarded to men who have specialized in generalization than to those who have confined themselves to engineering or to any other one profession.

Industry Is on Upgrade, '29 Banner Year for Finance

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, June 27.—An industrial upturn, such technical factors as the scarcity or abundance of money, margin or low interest rates, excessive speculation or conservative investment in the security markets, retardation or non-regulation of financial standing of the Reserve Board, big bankers or any other agency—the fact remains that American industry has been operated on a very profitable basis in the first half of 1929, and that present financial and industrial conditions are the most favorable of any period since the end of the war.

A member of the Federal Reserve Board throws bouquets at the Board in a recent report, which financial conditions are so favorable without raising rediscount rates it was able to force a big reduction in speculative borrowings in order to keep the stock market within bounds. It is a good thing for the financial interests that it was an extremely healthy condition of the treatment ordered by Reserve officers might have had a disastrous effect in the opinion of a good many practical bankers. While conservatism ruled in the first half, with heavy outstanding obligations on a good income to offset the activities of corporations, the industrial corporations were able to stand the shock administered by way of a reproof to

In the first months of the year they placed orders for 53,080 cars and the June placement was well up to the average of the first five months. At that rate more than 100,000 cars will be added to railroad equipment this year, to say nothing of the tank cars, refrigerators, gondolas and passenger cars. The reason is that railroad companies are pushing out for more business.

This is not an isolated case, but has been duplicated many times this year in the steel, copper, motor and other industries. At this time last year Henry Ford, the world's greatest producer of low-priced motor cars, was about to announce completely and General Motors Corporation was not ready to announce the duration of its new six-cylinder epoch-making Chevrolet. Today the orders for both cars are burning the wires to Detroit and other motor centers, and assembling calls for what the foreign markets will require. Ford and General Motors seem to be on an ever-increasing step.

Mr. Wiggin never attended a university. He was a student at Dwight school and the English High school in Boston until his 17th year when he went to work for a bank.

2 P. C. Payment Is on Back Dividends

Crocker, Wheeler Electric Manufacturing Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred, payable July 15 to stock of record July 5, and 2 per cent on account of accumulated dividends on the preferred, payable August 1 to stock of record July 22. This reduces the preferred accumulations to 10 per cent.

UTILITIES IN LEADERSHIP OF MARKET

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, June 27—Public utility stocks regained their front position on the speculative stage at today's opening on the big board in forecasts of the Wright and Curtiss airplane merger were accurate, with exception of omission of United Aircraft, which is apparently planning its own merger in other field. United lost 9 points while Wright and Curtiss sold within 1 point of or up on Wednesday's final prices.

Wall Street hummed with reports and rumors of a gigantic Morgan-Mellon-Bonbright-Biddle combination of gas and electric power and light properties, running up into billions of dollars and embracing most of the companies whose stocks have been soaring on all exchanges.

Utility stocks grabbed the spotlight in a dozen or more of major active shares resumed their climb to higher price levels.

Public Service of New Jersey, which is understood to be planning an exchange of stock with Morgan's United Corporation, sold up 2¾ points at 111¾, completing a gain of 35 points on the move. American Power & Light, which jumped 5¼ points to 112⅜; Consolidated Gas moved up 3 to 127⅛, United Gas and Electric, graduating from the curb, rose a point to 43½.

Most of the steel, copper and specialty stocks were under profit-taking today and sold off a point or two. Nevertheless more of spectacular gains since Monday, these losses were comparatively small. Chesapeake and Ohio led a move in the rails and sold up 3½ at 231¼.

Reports that directors of New York and Chicago reserve banks had passed to vote weekly for an increase in rediscount rate apparently settles for the time being the money rate question today's market. It is probable that discussion of bank matters by reserve bank directors here, also for the first time, will be confined to brokers' loans. Another increase is looked for, partly as the result of heavy liquidation of new stock sales by industrial corporations

Industrial stocks were churned around in a narrow price range with oils turning soft on reports of enormous production of crude, and in Pittsburgh and California.

Calling of loans were in small volume and the rate ruled at 10 per cent

Stocks Active and Up on the New York Curb

The New York Curb market was active and strong today. A block of 40,000 shares of Electric Bond and Shares advanced 2¼ to 113¼ and Electric Investors was up 2 at 193. Newmont Mining jumped 3¼ to 50. Goldman Sach Trading rose 2 to 101

There have been listed on the Boston Stock Exchange temporary certificates for 350,040 shares of Stone & Webster, Inc. The issue was authorized at par value and has an authorized amount of 1,500,000 shares. Authority was also given to add 363,441 additional shares on notice of issuance and payment

BOSTON COPPER LEADER IS HONORED

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

George A. Sloan, secretary of the Cotton Textile Institute, Inc., former secretary of the Copper & Brass Research Assn., discusses the remarkable "comeback" of the copper industry, cites a number of leaders as deserving special honors. Among them is a Boston copper "captain of industry," R. L. Agassiz, president of the famous old Calumet & Hecla. Calumet & Hecla is recently witnessed a severe internal battle, when minority stockholders sought to remove the head offices from Boston. It was voted to keep them, as of old, in the shadow of the State House on Beacon Hill.

The Taplin brothers, battling for control of the Wheeling & Lake Erie, rival the Van Sweringen brothers in attracting public interest. It seems passing strange that the Taplin brothers, whose activities have occupied columns in the public press, have been "too busy" to pose before a camera. I am told no photographs of them, young or otherwise, exist.

A good many of the photographs of leading financiers and business men are not nearly up to date as the press throughout America have favorite photographs and ask that these be used in preference to others that may be located.

Stuart Chase in "Men and Machines," a book to be published in July by the Macmillan Co., writes interestingly of the progress made by machinery. He links it in conventional fashion with the "unemployment problem." The critics will be disarmed, of course, if they read Dr. Chase's foreword: "Some day, somehow, we must come to terms with the machine. This book has been written in an attempt to find out what machines have done to us, are doing to us, and propose to do to us in the immediate future. It is distinctly an adventure, and not to be confused with a sober, documented, and exhaustive study."

Mr. Chase writes his book of "adventure" so interestingly that some of us wish he will write us he had ventured on the "sober, documented and exhaustive study." No doubt the sort of book that interests the larger number, however, will be the better seller, if not the best.

"California is almost exclusively dependent upon water for her power," writes Mr. Chase. "If the oil supply were cut off, she would have the utmost difficulty in shifting to a coal basis." At least the change might open up a new market for coal, if no substitute were made available.

• • •

Mr. Chase writes: "Machinery without lubrication is unthinkable. Modern industry is built upon petroleum lubricants. According to Mr. G. W. Stocking, there is no quantitative substitute for mineral lubricating oil; a sufficient supply of vegetable oils would require so much acreage as to cause serious inroads upon the food supply."

In this era of synthetic products, which today has no more than merely dawned, it is our opinion that petroleum products may yet have serious trouble holding their own in the markets long before the underground supplies have become exhausted. Synthetic gasoline has already been marketed.

If we are called upon to produce vegetable oils in such quantity as to make "serious inroads upon the food supply," such production will serve to alleviate the situation pictured recently by a government alarmist. He saw the United States in hard straits within a few years owing to a stopping of the growth of our population and the over-production of food!

Steam-electric power plants have reduced their unit coal consumption 42 per cent in eight years.

Sixty-one thousand locomotives of 1929 have 15 per cent more tractive power than the 64,000 locomotives of 1920.

In 1914 a man worked seven hours to produce a ton of pig iron now three hours and 20 minutes.

Scrapping old machines would increase American business profits $80,000,000 a month.

Reforms under way, if generally adopted, will save business eight in 10 billion dollars a year in distribution costs alone.

Business was appraised as 49 per cent wasteful in 1921.

Reduced cost of living and increasing income since that time are attributed to efficiency.

Every dollar and every effort saved by efficiency means more goods to sell, more profits, more business.

Elimination of the grade crossing is a different problem than many people suppose. The ordinary conception of a solution is to compel the railroads to abolish them. If it appears, however, that pressure on towns and cities to stop creating new grade crossings would be very helpful. From January 1, 1926, to January 1, 1928, 440 highway grade crossings were eliminated. Fine work indeed. In this same period the total number of highway grade crossings were increased by 233,701 to 256,283. This means that in this two-year period 2022 new grade crossings were created, or that highway authorities are building new grade crossings about seven times as fast as old existing crossings are being eliminated.

F. B. Keech & Co. say: "Perhaps the most interesting factor in the present situation is the drive in the trade of the bankers, who are apparently accumulating stocks in anticipation of easy funds within the next two weeks."

Permission has been obtained by Bank of Commerce & Trust Co. from the bank commissioner to open a branch in the Grove Hall section of Dorchester. This branch will be opened about September 1. Bank of Commerce & Trust also declared regular semi-annual dividend of $4, payable July 1.

Detroit, Toledo & Ironton, purchased by C. D. Barney & Co. from Henry Ford and Family for a buyer believed to be Pennsylvania Railroad, was bought by Ford in July, 1920, for 50 cents on the dollar of income bonds, $4 a share for preferred and $2 a share for common, an investment of $5,000,000. In 1924 figures indicated that in preceding five years the line had made enough to pay him $4,201,883. By use of road Ford reduced cash tied up in manufacturing centers by $28,000,000. In 1926, Commerce Commission placed tentative valuation of $11-$26,000 on road, which Ford protested, asserting $23,061,208 to be fair valuation figure.

The group are offering all or any part of an additional $20,000,000 at the same price of 99¾ and interest as the first loan. These bonds, it will be recalled, are unconditionally guaranteed by the Canadian Government with principal and interest payable in New York in United States gold coin, in Canada in Canadian currency and in London in pounds sterling. The successful distribution of the $40,000,000 of bonds included orders from all over the United States and Canada and abroad.

WESTINGHOUSE HAS NEW HEAD IN MERRICK

F. A. MERRICK

F. A. Merrick, an executive well known in the electrical industry, has just been elected president of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. by the Board of Directors of the company.

In announcing the election of Mr. Merrick to the presidency of the company A. W. Robertson, chairman, also stated that the board of directors, while accepting with regret the resignation of E. M. Herr, president since 1911, in order that he might go on an extended vacation, had elected him vice-chairman.

Mr. Merrick, long vice-president and general manager of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., is a native of New Jersey and received his technical education at Lehigh University. Shortly after his graduation, he was employed by the Steel Motor Co., a subsidiary of the Lorraine Steel Co., where he was responsible for many important electrical inventions and where he rose to the position of chief engineer.

Later he joined the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. at East Pittsburgh, Pa., where he had charge of the production of street railway motors. Upon the formation of the Canadian Westinghouse Co., Ltd., in 1903, he was sent there as superintendent. In this position, his ability for organization and for getting things done was quickly noticed. In turn, he became manager of works and finally vice-president and general manager of the Canadian Westinghouse Co., Ltd.

During the World War, when speed of action by all combined forces was necessary for the quick and winning of the conflict, Mr. Merrick was placed in charge of the factory of the New England Westinghouse Company at Chicopee Falls, Mass., which was engaged in turning out a large order of rifles for the British government. When the United States entered the war, the demands made upon the Chicopee factory were multiplied by the War Departments' orders for Browning machine guns.

Rapidity in the production of these guns was a vital factor in the plans of the Allies and, although Mr. Merrick had to reorganize and largely re-equip his factory in order to handle this work, he was able to complete 60,000 guns within 11 months after operations were begun. This manufacturing achievement has since been generally regarded by the industrial world as being without parallel.

After the war, Mr. Merrick was located in London, England, for two years as special representative of the Westinghouse Electric International Company, after which he returned to Canada, to resume his duties as vice-president and general manager of the Canadian Westinghouse Company.

His achievements before, during and after the World War won for him the position of vice-president and general manager of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company with headquarters at East Pittsburgh, to which he was appointed January 1, 1925. In June, 1925, he was also elected a director of the Westinghouse Electric Company.

Gain in Shipments of Gas Engines

Shipments of gas engines by Briggs & Stratton Corporation of Milwaukee for the first three months of this year totalled 35,666 units compared to 9,943 for the same period of 1928, according to Stephen Briggs, president.

The company is enlarging its engine line by redesigning one of its portable gas engines to develop four instead of two horsepower. Capacity of the engines range at present from one-half to two and one-half horsepower for use in operation of washing machines, lawn mowers, garden cultivators, garden tractors, water pumps, sprayers, portable saws, air compressors, rail driller and blower equipment.

Sales are particularly good in agricultural regions and isolated sections where there is no electric power available, and it is believed the power increase will open a larger field, Mr. Briggs said. Briggs & Stratton at present manufacture engines for more than 180 equipment companies.

BIG ORE STRIKE ON NO. BUTTE

Wire reports from Butte, Mont., state North Butte Mining Company has opened a 10-foot vein on the 800-foot level of its Granite Mountain mine running 6½ per cent copper, and another vein on the 1600-foot six feet wide and 5½ per cent copper.

The famous "Edith May" vein has been reopened and good ore is showing in its stopes.

Installation of a 10-inch water column will be completed in the Main Range shaft this week, and a 2200-foot crosscut toward the Continental Fault will be started July 1.

Production increased from 2500 tons in April to 4600 tons in May. Shipments in June 26 were 5500 tons, and output for the entire month is estimated at 6200 tons. Over 300 men are now employed.

Washing Machines Sales Are Larger

Net income after all charges, including depreciation and federal taxes, of the Altorfer Brothers Co. for the four months ended April 30 was in excess of preference dividends for the entire year, according to Silas Altorfer, president. Dividend requirements on this issue for the year amount to $90,000. Net income during the 17 per cent over last year," Mr. Altorfer said.

The company is the third largest manufacturer of washing machines for home use in the United States. Plants are located in Peoria and Roanoke, Ill. The convertible preference stock is listed on the Chicago Stock Exchange and traded in on the New York Curb.

EXPECT RECORD MONTH OF JUNE FOR AUTOS

Philadelphia, June 27 Automotive Industries this week will say: The production of automobiles and trucks during the last few days of June is being maintained at a rate that makes virtually certain the prediction appearing in Automotive Industries last week to effect that the total output this month would exceed that of any previous June. While, of course, there has been a decline since the all-time production record was established in April, this recession has been far less pronounced than that of former years, and it appears that the output this month will exceed by a considerable margin most of the previous estimates.

Automobile manufacturers as a whole say that no clouds at all are seen on the business horizon and report that retail sales continue at a satisfactory rate which justifies the production now maintained by the industry. It is certain, however, that the principal manufacturers are watching the new car stock situation vigilantly and it is certain that as soon as there is any pronounced backing up of new car stocks in the field, a curtailment of production sufficient to bring about an adjustment is to be expected.

July production will get away to a slow start because of the holiday in the first week of the month. A majority of the automobile factories will close on the night of July 3 and will not resume activities until July 8. Many also allow employees a vacation over the week-end. A number of students of production trends believe that the output next month will show a decline more pronounced than the gradual seasonal tapering of the past several weeks. Reports from a number of parts manufacturers, however, tend to show that the output next month will be maintained at a high level comparable with the same month in previous years.

STEEL MAKING IS HIT BY HOT WEATHER

Iron Age says: Summer is bringing a recession in activity of the steel industry, but this far hot weather and physical limitations of equipment have affected mill operations more than market conditions.

While open-hearth steel output has apparently diminished, with a limited number of furnaces allowed down for repairs, Bessemer steel production has gained. The recent hot weave has greatly restricted production of sheet and tin plate mills and has not materially relieved the demand for crude steel. Meanwhile total ingot output remains at close to 100 per cent of rated capacity, with little prospect of dropping more than two or three points before July 1.

Improvement in mill deliveries is more general, now being reported from Chicago, where producers' commitments are largest, but unless business in July shows quite a high rate on production next month is assured. The automobile industry has further curtailed operations and some motor car builders in preparing to bring out new models have made a 50 per cent reduction in steel tonnage on order and in stock.

No general decline in steel demand has developed. Requirements of railroads and construction work are expected to increase rather than diminish. Next week's railroad equipment purchases include 4000 steel box cn bodies for Pennsylvania and 25 additional locomotives for New York Central. Rail options are being exercised in full, further prolonging the present rate of rail mill operations.

Capital expenditures of railroads in the last three-quarters of the year, according to President Atkinson of American Railway Assn., will exceed the corresponding period in 1928 by $111,000,000.

Structural steel awards at 61,000 tons were the largest since last year's average. Over 1,000,000 tons of fabricating work is in early prospect of being placed, according to a leading steel company's survey of pending structural tonnage throughout the country.

Competitive relations between steel producing districts will be materially altered by decision of the Commerce Commission establishing a mileage scale of freight rates on iron and steel products in official classification territory.

Second only to the Federal Trade Commission order prohibiting Pittsburgh "plus" in its effects on steel distribution, the decision establishes an entirely new set up of rates for 90 per cent of the country's mill output. An incidental result is abolition of a blanket rate to New England points.

Cooke Elected to Telephone's Board

New York, June 26 (INS) Walter P. Cooke of Buffalo, who is nationally known for his public services, including several years' association with the work of the reparations commission, was appointed a director of the New York Telephone Company at the meeting of the board held here. Cooke is the first of four new directors authorized at the annual meeting of the stockholders held in March.

C. E. Mitchell Pace Setter in Recent Bank Groupings

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, June 27 America is still in the midst of important financial realignments. New York is setting the pace with bank mergers mixing up the financial lineage of the older institutions with the infusion of new blood. In the metropolis Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the National City Bank, the fifty-year-old human dynamo, has been the creator of the new financial fashion.

In the setup of the enlarged National City, with a separate charter for its security company and still another charter for its trust division, the City Bank Farmers Trust Company, the City Bank created a new pattern in mergers, forming a financial group of affiliated companies instead of a single corporation operating under one charter.

That the City Bank setup is the forerunner of a new trend is indicated by the fact that the same plan will be followed by a group of Chicago banks. At the end of this month the National Bank of the Republic and the First National Republic Company and the Chicago Trust Company will go under a common ownership.

In referring to the proposed merger, Melvin A. Traylor, president of the board of the Chicago Trust Company, informed me, "This permits a combination of interest and yet affords management possible for specialists."

In describing the new tendencies in banking, which are signalized by the impending merger in New York of the Bank of America and the Chatham & Phenix National Bank and also of the Chase National Bank and the National Park Bank, Mr. Teter explained: "I do not see a further trend toward chain banking and branch banking.

"Of course, I think the larger corporations, showing the general tendency of all business, have already tended to alter methods of banking. Fundamentally banking conditions do not change, but styles must change from time to time. While big business undoubtedly will be interested in banking, I doubt whether wise commercial leaders will undertake to go into the banking business. For this one appreciate the value of specialized training and would be unwilling to assume the responsibility of operating banks as they would be to operate on their own appendices.

"With the improvement in our banking laws and with better bank management there is no doubt that more and more people are using banks. This is due partially due to the fact of the more general distribution of wealth. I believe also that the so-called masses are learning a greater use of banks. For the year 1929 we are equivalent to $6.24 for each of such shares.

BRITISH MAYOR PRAISES PLANT OF NAUMKEAG

Cotton mills in Lancashire, Eng., which have suffered greater depression than the American cotton industry, are now operating about 85 per cent and are looking forward to resuming full time operations soon, according to John A. Ormerod, mayor of Blackburn, Eng., and a textile machinery manufacturer. He is attending sessions of the World Conference of the Presbyterian Church in Boston.

Visiting the Naumkeag Mills at Salem he most wonderful I have ever seen and I have been in the textile and machine trade," the mayor declared today while speaking of a visit to Salem yesterday.

It was amazed by the perfection there," he continued, "with 4000 looms and 173,000 spindles all on the same floor and with the most modern improvements. We have no mill like that in England. At the Naumkeag Mills all of the machinery is on one type of goods, all sheeting. In England each mill makes a great variety of goods and does not approach such production."

During his stay in Boston he has visited 83 mills in the state and has also been much interested in the historic points in Boston, making short trips in between the sessions of the conference. He plans to go to Philadelphia, Washington, Buffalo, Toronto, Ottawa and then sail home from Montreal.

1,500,000 Shares for Stone and Webster

In connection with the corporate readjustment under way by Stone & Webster, Inc., it is stated that total authorized capital will be 1,500,000 shares, of which 400,000 are now being offered to the public. 683,229 are outstanding or available in respect of old shares and 175,761 are to be issued to present stockholders and there are associates in exchange for securities including common shares of Engineers Public Service Co., General Public Service Corporation and Tampa Electric Co., having a market value as of June 24, 1929, of $17,576,100. This makes a total of 1,258,981 shares to be presently outstanding, leaving 241,019 unissued. There will be no underwriting of the 400,000 shares to be offered directly by the company.

The average net earnings of the old company (without taking into account profits from sales of investments held) for the last three calendar years are equivalent to $4.48 per share on the new common, available for the outstanding shares of the old company, and similarly the net earnings for the year 1928 are equivalent to $6.24 for each of such shares.

Tight Money Seen Until After July 4

The present flurry in call money signals the mid-year stringency, which may become more pronounced as the July 1 payment date approaches, according to Frank O. Weinore, chairman of the First National Bank of Chicago and chairman of the Federal Advisory Council.

Mr. Weinore expects tight money conditions to continue until three or four days after July 4. It is too early to say what constructive activities designed to relieve the furnaces for the sake of crop movements, especially in states particularly affected, such as Kansas City, the banker added.

HART EXPECTED TO HEAD CAST FOR TALKIE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, June 27.—William S. Hart is going to make a talkie. Poor Bill has had all sorts of bad luck the last few years and just when he thought everything was set for him to make a Western for Hal Roach the powers that be had a change of mind and decided that a cannon was no longer sufficiently popular to warrant a talkie. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials explained it was not a personal reflection against Hart but rather an earnest belief that these western thrillers were no longer what the public wanted.

C. W. Murnau and Robert Flaherty, who recently formed the Colorart Company are negotiating with Bill Hart with a plan to put him at the head of his own unit. Strange as it may seem these Hart pictures will not be in color. Tiffany-Stahl has agreed, so it is rumored, to release these talking westerns which are among the few of their kind to be made. Let's all hold a good thought for Old Bill that this deal will not get sidetracked.

ISN'T "The Battle of the Ladies" a perfect title for a Ramon Novarro picture? Can't you just see all the Susans and Lizzies rushing their swains into the theatre to see Ramon in a movie with this provocative name? There is another reason, too, why the world at the moment is interested in young Novarro.

"The Pagan" was one of the most successful, synchronized pictures that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has produced. Its delicacy and its ability to really get the spirit of the South has made it a most charming screen romance. Sydney Franklin will direct "The Battle of the Ladies." Think of Franklin, whose metier is exquisite costume pictures, megaphoning a film with such an obvious title.

THE Blues are certainly taking our Hollywood by storm. Did you ever know that Fanny Brice has a sister-in-law, May Clarke, the wife of Lew Brice, who is a popular young actress who has played the lead in New York in "The Nooze," and got some very favorable notices. She arrives here Saturday to play opposite Lee Tracy in "Big Time," the Fox talkie that is being produced on the lot now with William Collier, Sr., and Kenneth Hawks directing. It is supposed to be a story of behind the scenes in Hollywood. Whoopee! Won't they eat that up throughout the country?

WE get so used to these prima donnas attending all our social activities that we do not get half the thrill out of them of big names of famous stage folk. Vivienne Segal, who was one of the popular young actresses brought west by Warner Brothers, is to have a prima donna role in "Golden Dawn," the operetta in which Walter Wolfe, Noah Beery and Merriam "Peanuts" Bryan, are so importantly cast. "The Desert Song," the first of the musical comedies filmed, has made John Boles' name popular with the fair sex all over the country.

IF there is gossip that Gloria Swanson had a substitute sing for her she will have the word of several newspaper folk that she did her own warbling. Invitations were sent out a few nights ago to some of us to come to the Pathe studios and hear Gloria sing. Unfortunately she chose to do her singing on a night when I had to work so I couldn't go and furnish a first-hand report. But—there are those who heard her who say that she manages to get in some high notes and not stumble over her do-re-mi.

ANY story with a musical background can be reasonably counted upon to be desirable as a movie. That is how the talkies have revolutionized our screen. Marion Harris, whose voice has been so popular on the phonograph and in vaudeville, is playing the lead in "Lord Byron of Broadway." This is not, as you might imagine, a musical comedy, but it is a story in which songs and dances have a very big part.

Charlie King who is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's gift to the talkie world, will play opposite Miss Harris. Harry Rapf, who now has a pleasant little job of competing with his own handiwork, The Hollywood Revue of 1929," will supervise and William Nigh will direct this Lord Byron picture.

IF Molly O'Day can lose just a few more pounds she will be down to the weight she was when she made "The Patent Leather Kid" and it means the absolute guarantee of a starring role in a picture. Molly has lost 10 pounds on the 18-day diet and now she has gone to one of the nearby Hot Springs

Doomed, Asked Seven Speeches and Songs At His Funeral

Cleveland, Tenn., June 27 (AP)—Prospect of death in the electric chair has prompted Homer C. Simpson, former police chief here, to ask for seven speeches, seven songs, 6 former companion officers and soldiers as pallbearers at his funeral.

"I hate to leave this world of unmerciful sin and trouble," the condemned man wrote to friends here, "but I welcome a land where there are no funerals nor graves on the hillsides."

CHARGE LIQUOR THEFT TO U. S. AGENTS

Detroit, June 27 (INS)—Five men, whom Canadian officials claim were U. S. dry agents, raided a Canadian export dock Monday night and seized 15 cases of liquor, according to reports received here today.

The export dock, located at Port Lampton, Ont., was owned by Joseph Thibodeau.

Thibodeau charged that his dock watchman was covered with guns while the dry raiders loaded the liquor loot aboard their launch and made away for American shores. He claimed he had learned that 15 cases of liquor of the same description were turned over to Government dry heads on the American side some time ago.

The matter has not been officially reported to U. S. authorities, Walter S. Franklin, acting collector of customs, said today.

PUZZLE

Talking pictures are all the great rage abroad, young Mr. Lowe said—particularly in the non-English speaking countries. He cited as an example the great run that "The Broadway Melody" is making in London.

Since Mr. Hoover has pointed them out, it now remains for some genius to establish the connection between our high ideals of morality and our equally high rate of murder.

Early up, this being the days I have promised to take my poor zaney to Milord Woolworth's to shew her the sights; and she did run hither and yon, ooping of her mouth in wonderment, and will not leave until I busk her an stocking and promise to buy the mate, come pay days; and so home billing and cooing like two birdies.

Marry an Heiress?

Very Easy to SAY

(Copyright, 1929)

Dr. Zinsser, professor of bacteriology in the Harvard Medical School, complains, with reason, that young men studying medicine with a scientific point of view, after four years of post-graduate work and two years of hospital work, "are paid worse than a broker's clerk, a chauffeur or a floor walker."

Professor Zinsser advises young scientists to marry heiresses instead of allowing them to be captured by foreign noblemen.

That's sound advice, but the foreign nobleman, whose post-graduate course from the nursery up consists of the gentle art of pleasing heiresses, start with an advantage.

A fine coat-of-arms, expert bowing, scraping and hand-kissing, with fine tales of European grandeur, fascinate young female wealth. A young doctor's intimate knowledge of microbes is less pleasing.

Hot and Cold?

Yes, Both, and VERY

(Copyright, 1929)

Dr. William T. Foster, economist, says the Federal Reserve Board vacillates and "blows hot and cold."

It blows cold on the little bank out of New York, blows nice and hot on the big New York bank, icy cold on the American investor.

There is probably no intentional favoritism or market rigging in Reserve Board methods.

Men on the board are, generally speaking, small fish financially. They look with awe on a giant New York bank in the "billion" class, and think little of smaller bankers that are of their own size.

It is the servility of the mentally and financially small man.

To Make Whiskey Old

Also Yourself

Copyright, 1929

Mr. Gussey, of Perry County, Pa., has discovered a "magic fluid" which "ages" bootleg whiskey immediately.

Mr. Gussey sold the whiskey, "magic fluid" and all, for one dollar a gallon. You can make real whiskey, you know, of corn or rye for about 20 cents a gallon. At the moment, Mr. Gussey is in jail.

It may interest the customers of bootleggers to know that ordinary bootleg, without any magic fluid, is guaranteed to age, very quickly, those that drink it, to say nothing of killing a good many of them.

Less Power to Him

By NELSON HARDING

The burden of this little song
Is that a Trust may grow too strong
And Powerful, and, being such,
Attempt to gather in too much.

It's well the sun's bright burning beam
Makes overstrong one's sweat and stream,
For when the sunbeams get too warm
Grasping giants do less harm. —N. H.

Most Marvelous Animal

It Has Two Legs and Its Name Is MAN

(Copyright, 1929)

ICHIDO RAN A GOOD RACE, BUT—

Ripley, who collects strange facts for that eminent publisher, Mr. Cyrus H. K. Curtis, made this picture of a horse that ran 105 miles in 12 hours and dropped dead. It was a marvelous achievement.

But what a horse can do with all its power is not much compared to what a man can do.

Take a horse to the North Pole, he will die. A man will thrive there.

Take a polar bear down to the Equator, and he will die. A man will live there. Millions of them do live there.

When it comes to running, nothing equals man, although he wasn't made primarily to run far or very fast.

In a six-day race a man ran more than 600 miles in six days "go as you please." No horse on earth could do it.

And the man didn't die at the end of his race. On the contrary he was elected Mayor of Long Island City, N. Y., and lived happily for 2 long time afterwards.

He builds a little automobile runabout that in two hours can go as far as the horse Ichido II ran in 12 hours, keep it up for 100 hours, and be none the worse for it.

Of all the animals that roam the earth, man is champion. He can talk around the world without wires, measures the weight of the sun, moon, and distant stars.

He can photograph objects so far away that the light traveling 186,000 miles per second would take 1,000,000 years to get there.

Man can't help fighting other men yet, but perhaps he will conquer even THAT.

He is only 12,000 years from the Stone Age. This earth still has several hundred million years to go. Plenty of time for civilization and improvement.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

MR. CHESTER CROWELL on cowardice, laziness, conceit or stupidity.

broadcasting from the May issue of the Cosmopolitan magazine, speaks of various things, among them of the necessity of NOT leaving "well enough alone."

"—we have contracts to sign, lands to buy, jobs to quit and other jobs to seek; we are in the wrong part of the country and ought to move, in the wrong business, in the wrong business location—in short we have momentous and hazardous decisions to make. Common sense, coupled with ambition says, 'Do it.' FEAR, INERTIA, AND ALL THE MILLSTONES CHANT THEIR ANCIENT SLOGAN: LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE."

"Several times in my life I have quit a good job to take a better one and every time there seemed to me cogent reasons for vegetating instead of climbing. Every time I was treated to a fog of bad advice. And every time I had to come out of that fog laboriously."

Good words! I'll wager most promising characters have been hamstrung by the advice "let well enough alone" than by any other device of the devil.

The human race would never have developed beyond the tadpole stage if everyone had been content to let well enough alone. Every inch of our progress has been based on some brave creature's refusal to let well enough alone.

What is this "well enough" which so many of us accept as the goal of our achievement?

It is not perfection nor even the hope of perfection. It is a surrender and a compromise. And nearly always that compromise is based

"But suppose I do make a change and then go broke or fall sick or get into trouble?" you ask.

Well, suppose you do. These things might happen to you even though you stayed as "put" as a potted geranium. So take a chance with yourself. God gave you the makings of an up-and-at-em career. USE THOSE MAKINGS! DON'T LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE! DEMAND SOMETHING BETTER!

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

PERHAPS it's just a complex, but I never could hate a cheerful liar—and I just love a graceful one!

The people I hate are the "worthy" ones, who are perpetually telling me the TRUTH.

To this day I hate the brutal little boy who first told me that there wasn't any Santa Claus. He robbed me of my Fairyland and dimmed the glamour of all my Christmas Eves forever and ever afterward!

I hate the artist who draws an "honest likeness" of me—and I love the photographer who uses his skill and his imagination to make me look like a prize beauty. HE'S the artist!

I hate the first man who confessed that he had lied to me. Why couldn't he have gone right on lying—and left me my illusions?

I hate the people who tell me that filet-of-sole is nothing but glorified flounder, and that pate-de-foie-gras is made by torturing geese. They spoil my appetite.

Also the people who insist on informing me that my favorite movie star always uses a "double" for the thrilling feats; that my favorite blonde is purely "chemical," and that my favorite author uses a "ghost-writer."

I hate the woman who tells me that I'm not the type for sport clothes. Why can't she see that they make me look "cute" or younger or snappier—and let me go on dreaming?

I hate the clever little cook, who tells me that they put soda in the peas, to make them that lovely green, and baking powder in the eggs to make them light and fluffy, and coloring matter in the jelly, and grenadine in the cocktails to kill the taste of the gin.

I hate the pessimists who assure me that there's no such thing as brotherly love, or world peace, or honest men, or good women, or happy marriages, or genuine buttermilk—or Paradise!

I hate the people who rob me of my vanity, my illusions, my faith and my dreams! Why can't they let me go on fooling myself—and being happy?

I don't hate people who DECEIVE me. I hate people who are forever trying to UNdeceive me. I hate the Know-It-Alls! They make me TIRED!!

Give me a cheerful liar with a tender heart in preference to an honest JOY-KILLER every time!!

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

CONGRESS has just run a string of resolutions against the endorsement of Liet Ericson as the discoverer of America.

Ericson, known as Liet the Lucky, was a member of the Loose-Liet dynasty of the Norseland.

They roamed wherever the wind blew and the only map they had was the horizon. The loosest of the Liets was Ericson and Longfellow wrote a poem about the skeleton in an armored car which must have been held up by a payroll bandit.

Congress claims that Liet never set a five-toed foot in American districts. This history is a little close to vacation time, but don't forget that when Congress says a thing is so, there is a chance of it being that way.

The honor of discovering a 36 state plurality has been claimed by the Norsemen, the Essenes and the Chinese.

But they forget to validate their claims by starting a system of grocery stores.

In fact is supposed to have discovered America over 500 years ago, we hope the Senate doesn't delay any more about this matter. It has gone far enough now.

If there are any pensions to be paid or war debts to be evaded, we trust that they are treated with our usual liberal and generous veto.

Liet has been defeated in Congress, which is such an authority on a conglomeration of events that it once passed a law permitting Doctor Mary Walker to wear trousers.

And Mary wore them, too. She was never quite manly because she pinned them to her vest.

We just mention these detached facts to let you know that when Congress passes a law it is just as final as an elevator passing a roof.

But we cannot understand how even such an influential clique as the Congress of the U. S. can hope to stop gambling in Wall Street by stitching more laws to the flag.

But it intends to do that trifling little thing. Which is a foolish way for an August body to act in June.

You cannot stop speculating in Wall Street any more than you can stop the perspiration from gathering on the brow of a coward.

The congressional idea of halting speculation is by making credit difficult.

We would like to know when it was easy.

And, if the brokers want to chisel each other, they will keep on doing it even if they have to use tobacco coupons for collateral.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The victory of success is half won when one gains the habit of work. —Bolton.

The highest and most lofty trees have the most reason to dread the thunder. —Rollin.

We learn wisdom from failure much more than from success. We often discover what will do by finding out what will not do, and probably he who never made a mistake never made a discovery. —Smiles.

There been two things that are necessarie and needfulle, and that is good conscience and good loos (good report); that is to seyn, good conscience to thym own persone inward, and good loos for thy neighbor outward. —Chaucer.

There are two worlds: the world that we can measure with line and rule, and the world that we feel with our hearts and imagination. —Hunt.

Friendship is the great chain of human society, and intercourse of letters is one of the chiefest links of that chain.

To the timid and hesitating everything is impossible because it seems so. —Scott.

A brave man thinks no one his superior who does him an injury, for he has it then in his power to make himself superior to the other by forgiving it. —Pope.

Medbury Says—

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

LOVE comes only once to every man, but that doesn't stop him from getting married three or four times.

Pitiful Case

Social Errors

Never interrupt a man who's talking to himself. He's probably in conference.

Necessary Evils

Revolvers are all right, but we still have divorce laws for women who want to get rid of their husbands in the old-fashioned way.

Ode to a Boulevardier

Never count your chickens before you pick them up.

Today's Tight-Wad

The Scotchman who struck a thermometer in his wife's cold cream to see if she was being cheated.

Advice to the Love-Worn

Domineering wives make the best husbands.

The Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

ENOUGH of doubt! Today I turned aside
From every futile quest;
Today the last unanswered question died
And peace possessed my breast.

Too long, too long have wise men read the stars
And sought through them to find
The truth behind old gods and avatars,
The chart for ways that wind.

At last the swimmer, wearied by the tide,
Floats on the buoyant wave,
So I, who seek no more what lifs denied,
Find joy in all life gave.

Enough of doubt! It is not time to tread
Beyond the three-barred gate;
Enough to go unfaltering, unafraid,
At last content to wait.

From quests of time and of eternity
I find release,
At last afloat upon the buoyant sea
Of love and peace.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 27—The New Yorker does not need such a gaudy pretense as a passport to explore restaurants of the world. They are right at his doorstep. The gastronomic explorer has a hundred or more out-of-the-way by-paths which offer him as many gustatory diversions.

He may eat in all languages including the Scandinavian. They offer their native dishes as well as native smells and brigandage. Perhaps the best known French cafes are the Brevoort and Lafayette with practically the same menus to be found at Feyot's or the Voisin.

In all there are probably 300 real French restaurants. Next in number are the Italian where everything from minestrone soup at Mineta's in Mulberry st. to sabbagone at Pietro's in the Bronx is precutable. And at many there is likely a dusty little bottle of chianti properly tilted in the basket.

German cooking has had a big revival in the past two years. The famous Luchow's on 14th street where sauerbraten mit kartoffelklossen is always billed is prospering with old time flourish. And 6th street has its block of braustubels with pig's knuckles and apple strudel. Hoboken, too, is nearby.

The Russian cafes are almost all in dim lit cellars and those that do not offer vodka—and most do—offer Russian kretchms and shashlick caucasskey and naturally heavy bortsch soup. They are popular with the refugees but also welcome the average diner out.

The Far East is represented by Shiaki. The Bamboo Forest. The Ceylon India Inn and a dozen other fiery dishes—including the red hot Singhalese pepper steak. All are prepared on glowing charcoals before your eyes. Darkest Africa in Harlem has its culinary yam and fried catfish thrills, too.

Brazilian cafes with eggs malaguena. Roumanian with goulash concoctions. Mexican with chili. Hungarian with pot roasts and stuffed red cabbage and Ye Olde English inns with roast beef and Yorkshire pudding are scattered about. So also are Chinese and Japanese eateries. Draw up a chair!

From Metropolite: "You are hipped about the charm of a country town. Most of them are festering sink-holes of malicious and cruel gossip. Only the big city ever attains tolerance. Finally, I visited your birth place, Plattsburg, recently and I heard 20 knocks to one boost for you."

Ever fly a June bug with a thread? Some fun, some fun!

Marshall Nielan stood under a theater canopy the other night rubbing his eyes and gazing at a program announcement which read:

Act 1—A day in May.
Act 2—The next morning.
Act 3—The same afternoon six months later.

After owning an auto a year a New Yorker learns nothing is so important as the first scratch and nothing so unimportant as the last. You get so you like to scratch it just for fun.

A beauty expert discovers there are more beautiful girls working in department stores than in the chorus. One of Ziegfeld's "glorified" honeys was a waitress in a restaurant where he lunched. George White found a dazzler at the telephone switchboard of a Broadway hotel and Earl Carroll's best beauty bet was a program girl in a theater.

A New York dramatic critic has notified three producing companies he will have no use for future first night tickets for their productions. "I cannot be annoyed," he announces airily.

Manhattan's prize pessimist has been smoked out by Bill Lengel, the magazine editor. "This bird," he declares, "is such a gloom that when he craves a little gaiety he spends an hour or so in front of the display window of a surgical shop on West 57th st."
